A DULL HOLIDAY

Weather Interferes With Celebration of the Glorious Fourth

The celebration of the Fourth was handicapped in this city as elsewhere by the inclement weather, which put a literal damper both on noise and nuisance and caused a postponement of the more spectacular features which had been planned.

The fire department had but two alarms, one of them proving to be false, and the police had equally light work.

Newton Centre, Newton Highlands, Upper Falls and Waban carried out part of the arranged programs under difficulties.

At Newton Centre there was an interesting parade held in the morning, headed by the Ninth Regiment band, with Grand Army veterans, Plattsburg recruits and allegorical groups representing the "Spirit of '76," "Spirit of '61," and "Spirit of 1916."

One of the pretty features was a float entered from the Sunday School of the Sacred Heart parish, under the direction of Rev. Fr. James F. Haney, curate of the church. Daintily dressed children rode on a cart decorated to represent flowerland. The men who formed the committee in charge of the celebration carried, spread out, an American flag 25 by 40 feet, and 16 girls displayed a banner on which was inscribed "All Our Brothers Have Gone to Mexico."

First prize went to Lewis Volpe, who entered a float constructed of bicycles; second prize was given to Miss Mary Raymond, who represented Columbia, and the third individual prize was given to Philip Rising, who, by using a queerly constructed costume, appeared to be walking on his hands over the entire route.

There were many automobiles in line, and William Hahn got the prize for the best decorated machine. Dr. George L. West was chairman of the committee in charge. Newton Center's and Newton Highlands combined fireworks display was postponed to Saturday night.

At Newton Highlands a parade was held. The entries were divided into two groups, labeled "live ones" and "dead ones," the first group including Wilson, Hughes, Taft, Roosevelt and other famous men, while the second detachment included Julius Caesar, Grant, Lee, Napoleon Bonaparte and Bryan.

The parade included many automobiles and the trophy for the best appearing one was given to Henry E. Williams, whose machine was decorated with flags. James Klingman headed the committee in charge.

At Newton Upper Falls the only feature that was held was the morning parade. Fred Fontenay, who had a float representing a huge rooster, got first prize in that division, while a group of Boy Scouts got second prize and members of Needham Council, K. of C., whose float was labeled, "In Mexico," got the third prize. Individual awards went to Elmer Billings, Olive Duval, Francis Roman, Louis Crowley and Madeline Fitzgerald.

All the other numbers on the program including sports, fire works, taker's booths, etc., will be held next Saturday on the Upper Falls playground on Chestnut street from 1.00 to 12.00 P. M. There will be a ball game between the Upper Falls A. A. and the Beechwood A. C. at 3 o'clock.

Waban

Although with few spectators on account of the rain, all the sports scheduled for the morning of the Fourth were run off in Waban, the following named winning cups in the various classes. Class A, girls, Elizabeth Hovoy; class B, girls, Dorothy Gourley; class A, boys, Ainsworth Rne; class B, boys, Huntington Wardwell; class C, boys, Edwin Codman; class D, boys, Malcolm Hill. Two teams started a ball game about four o'clock and all who participated can appropriately be called "Braves" as a good part of the game was played in the rain and conditions for a ball game were far from ideal. Capt. Don Hill's team of youngsters put up a good fight but succumbed to the team of older players a number of whom it is hinted are professionals.

Medals were awarded to each member of the winning team.

The Band Concert and fireworks were postponed until Wednesday evening when a good crowd assembled on the playground and all adjoining property.

The fireworks were handled in good shape and the exhibition was snappy and brilliant, thanks to the oversight of Mr. Harry Tilton, who acted for the committee and whose selections were all applauded. The band concert from seven until ten was very satisfactory and quite a number enjoyed dancing to the music. Many from the other Newtons enjoyed the Wednesday evening entertainment.

A number of young ladies sold flags the proceeds to go to the families of soldiers now on the Mexican border.

Brae Burn Club

The weather disturber returned Tuesday in time to mar the Fourth of July celebration at Brae Burn, but in spite of the steady downpour a large number of members and their guests were present at the dinner dance which was held in the evening.

There were 185 covers laid for diners and Quimby's Band of Lynn, was in attendance for the dancing which followed.

Among those who entertained were Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Ayer, Mr. and Mrs. Edward N. Kimball, Mr. and Mrs. C., whose float was labeled, "In

GOOD WORK

Mrs. James G. White of Newton Centre, wife of Genl. White, formerly commissary Genl. of the Mass. Militia, has worked indefatigably, visiting families of the men who have gone to the front that need immediate assistance, thus saving a great deal of time of the committee appointed by the Mayor, and has the hearty thanks of the committee and it should be greatly appreciated by all Newton people. She has worked early and late and secured unquestioned facts of the condition of these women and children that are left in straightened circumstances. We wish there were more like her.

It is stated that socks and underwear are needed for these men who are serving their country, could not the ladies of Newton help in this way.

WILL OPEN BATH HOUSE

Playground Commission Arranges for Bathing in Crystal Lake

The Playground Commission has now been able to make arrangements during this summer for the use of the present bath house at Crystal Lake, and is planning to open the bath house and supervise bathing at this Lake about Wednesday, July 12, 1916.

The Commission appreciates the disagreeable disturbances of the past, and has no intention of continuing bathing unless these things can be stopped and remedied.

Mr. Miller, although opposed at the beginning to the continuance of bathing, is ready to co-operate and give us one more trial.

The Commission hopes that all will suspend judgment on the matter until they have been given a chance to see if bathing at this Lake cannot be properly handled.

The Commission would appreciate any information as to disregard by the bathers of the rights of others, and respectfully requests the co-operation of all in the experiment.

WILLIAM C. BREWER, Chairman, CHARLES F. JOHNSON, Secretary, ALBERT P. CARTER, THOMAS J. LYONS, RALPH W. ANGLIER, Playground Commission.

EDITORIAL

Residents of Newton Centre evidently have good reason to complain, not at the bathing in Crystal Lake, but at the inadequate police protection afforded them from the hoodlums who make the bathing an excuse for misconduct. It might be possible by a system of registration to limit the bathing privileges to residents of this city and thereby keep a more careful watch over the actions of the bathers in travelling to and from the bathhouse.

Men who have enlisted in the United States army, and have been sent to the Mexican frontier, leaving behind them wives and young children who may become destitute, may possess what passes as patriotism but they evidently have little common sense. The present situation does not justify abandonment of family or leaving loved ones to exist on the charity of others.

The State Police evidently proceed on the theory that they know it all in matters of fire protection and intend to show their authority on every possible occasion. With the care and consideration given the fire hazard conditions in this city, there is little reason for arbitrary action by any state authority.

The repairs now being made to the Centre street railroad bridge in Newton will correct a long endured evil.

Senator Weeks reply to Mayor Curley is complete and explicit.

POLITICAL NOTES

The retirement of Senator George H. Ellis has brought out the announcement of various candidates to succeed him in the State Senate. Representative James E. McPherson of South Framingham and former representative Naphen are already in the field and other names have been tentatively suggested.

Mr. McPherson is fortunate in securing the following strong endorsement from his colleagues from this senatorial district in the House.

James E. MacPherson, Esq.,
Framingham, Mass.

Dear Mr. McPherson. We are glad to know that you are a candidate for the Senate to succeed Mr. Ellis in the First Middlesex district.

As your colleagues in the House of Representatives we have had opportunity to judge of your integrity, ability and energy, and we do not hesitate to express our confidence in you and our sincere belief that you will be a fitting successor of Mr. Ellis in our district. Sincerely yours,

J. Weston Allen,
Thomas J. Weston, Jr.,
Benjamin Loring Young.

The above unanimous expression of confidence in Representative MacPherson by his colleagues from this end of the senatorial district is an unusual endorsement. A written endorsement of Representative MacPherson, headed by the Hon. Samuel L. Powers, has already been signed by a large number of prominent Newton men and, with the backing of his own town, and many friends in the other towns, it looks as if the Framingham man had the confidence of the people of this district to an unusual degree.

FIRE HAZARD WORK

Public Buildings Commissioner Forbush with the approval of Mayor Childs has awarded the B. F. Smith Co. of Pawtucket, general contractors, the work of making the general changes in the 24 school buildings which were recommended by the Fire Hazard Commission, and for which the city government has appropriated about $25,000. The Smith contract will amount to about $25,000. Mr. Forbush is preparing plans and specifications at the present time for the installation of the sprinkler system recommended by the Fire Hazard Commission, and which will cost about $22,000 additional. The Smith Company is already at work and it is hoped will have everything completed in time for the opening of school in September.

A serious complication has arisen with the State Police over the scope of the work, the city officials believing they had come to an agreement with Chief Plunkett last week, in all matters except the work to be done at the Technical High School. At a conference held yesterday, however, this settlement was questioned and has been referred to City Solicitor Bishop to handle. The State Police requirements in the matter outside of the Technical High are so unnecessary and arbitrary that the city ought to appeal to the courts if an agreement cannot be reached.

At the Technical High School the State Police are insisting on the erection of additional fire proof staircases at each end of the building and in the other school houses the police wish all the stairwells made fireproof in every way.

The big event of the week was the annual celebration in commemoration of the Glorious Fourth, which took place Thursday evening at the Brae Burn Country Club, West Newton, and it was an occasion where members and their guests turned out in large numbers there being practically two thousand present.

The Club House and its picturesque surroundings presented a scene of rare brilliancy. Japanese lanterns were hung on the ornamental shade trees and myriads of vari-colored incandescent lights cast a soft iridescence about the Bowling Green.

The woodlands at the base of the golf course were illumined with reds and the vast number of enthusiastic spectators were treated to one of the most magnificent pyrotechnical displays ever witnessed in Newton.

The limits of space preclude the possibility of exhaustively treating the subject of the beauties of Brae Burn on this festive occasion. The superb kaleidoscope of the various colored lights, illuminations and fireworks must be witnessed to be appreciated. No verbal description can adequately convey an idea of the splendor of the scene. Viewed from the verandas of the club and the windows of the Garden Tea Room, the effect was weirdly enchanting and appeared as a beautiful animated picture.

From half past seven until eight o'clock a delightful concert was furnished by Quimby's Military 8th Regiment Band of twenty accomplished musicians, which was placed on the lawn, directly in front of the club house.

Good music is always a feature of the entertainments at Brae Burn. Believing that people who really care for music, want good music, only artists of ability are engaged.

After the display of fireworks, dancing was enjoyed on the Bowling Green, which was crowded with the enthusiastic disciples of the Terpsichorean pastime.

Everywhere there was gaiety and activity; hundreds of motor cars throbbed impatiently to unload their never-ending chain of visitors, and sent the rays of their searchlights beaming along Fuller street.

Never in the history of the Club was there a more successful and enjoyable celebration of the nation's holiday, which was carried out to perfection in every detail with the exception of the date.

The affair was under the efficient management of the members of the House Committee, Messrs. William B. H. Dowse, Harry L. Ayer, Frank J. Hale and Frank J. Witherbee, who spared neither effort nor expense to make it a success.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE NOTES

Items of Interest to Friends of the Cause

In the National Convention of the Democratic Party in St. Louis the following was the vote of New England for and against the suffrage plank:—
Massachusetts.....Yes 30, No 6
Maine.....Yes 6, not present 6
Vermont.....Yes 8, not present 8
Rhode Island.....Yes, No 1
Connecticut.....Yes 13, No 1

The convention gave this overwhelming vote right on the heels of a speech by Senator Walsh of Montana in which he swung the club of the woman's vote over its head. He wasted no words on sentiment. He didn't talk about the hand that rocks the cradle, he made no appeal for equal justice to the sexes. He told the convention to adopt the suffrage plank or give up the electoral votes of the states where the women's party has the ballot and give up the control of the United States Senate.

He told them that the women had the votes to beat the Democratic party, to give the Presidency and the Senate to the Republicans, and that unless this plank was adopted they would do it.

This item from the Boston Herald is a good object lesson on Direct Influence versus Indirect Influence. The Antis used the indirect method to prevent the introduction of the Suffrage plank in the platform of the Democratic party. The Suffragists used the Direct method of the power of their votes and won out.

Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles of California who has just been elected president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs is a pacifist and suffragist and in her closing statement at the conference on education at the biennial in New York she said: "The women of America will always stand and work for world peace."

"No door of opportunity is closed to woman now," said Governor Whitman of New York at the opening session of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, "and never will be again. The rewards of preferment increasingly await upon merit rather than upon sex. As a people, State, and nation, who will say that we have not benefited? Much that seemed a noble tradition in the past, now seems a superstition. Women receive equal importance with men in the telling events of the Twentieth Century."

"I won't dispute the dictum that woman's place is the home, but the State has entered the home and woman must take an active interest in the State to care for the home. Much of the outside work is mothering on a large scale. To say that woman has not time for civic affairs is an insult to her intelligence. What once took a day for a woman to perform in her own home now takes a few minutes over the telephone."

The women suffragists can rightly claim a distinct victory in the commitment of the Republican party to their cause, even though that organization insists that the question be one for the states to decide. No preceding convention of a great party has gone so far as this. Doubtless the close vote on the question in Iowa this week had something to do with imparting the notion that this extension of the suffrage was somewhat inevitable, and that the G. O. P. ought not in consequence to give support in the twelve states where women will vote in the coming election. The Democrats will of course, go just as far, particularly as their candidate came out for woman suffrage and so voted in the New Jersey election. Here is an issue which the Progressives had all to themselves four years ago, on which they must now divide honors with both the other parties.

Chicago, June 8—Defying a heavy rain storm, driven by a cold west wind, 5000 women yesterday marched in the parade of the National Equal Suffrage Association, giving an unprecedented demonstration of loyalty to the cause for which they are fighting—women's votes.

Mrs. Thomas A. Edison gave a reception the other day to the delegates to the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mr. Edison made them a suffrage speech.

"It is no longer denied that woman suffrage will shortly be established throughout the United States," says Mr. Edison. "The evidence from the States in which women have voted goes to prove that with the ballot women are more fairly treated under the law, the working woman is better protected, and social and moral improvement is accelerated."

Former Congressman Burton Lee French of Idaho, who was unfavorable to woman suffrage in that State in 1896, when the right was granted, from practical experience with woman suffrage. I believe it has raised the moral tone of political life throughout the State, particularly in county politics."

Woman suffrage has never been a great public question in France, but as one of the results of the war it has become practical.

It is foreseen that after the war the voice of a large part of the country will be heard in the elections on account of many of the men having been killed.

Hence the proposition has been put forward in influential quarters to give the right to vote to women heads of families in which the male head has been killed. The plan is now no more than in the air, but the leaders of the feminists are already beginning to figure on the logical consequences.

With the delegates instructed on the question by their local organizations, the Tennessee Federation of Women's Clubs went on record for equal suffrage for the first time in its history May 5, by a vote of 96 to 43.

If we give to woman the sacred duty of teaching to our children the ideals that must be passed down for ages, we should not be afraid to let her participate in government.—W. J. Bryan.

Daily Thought.

I am fully convinced that the soul is indestructible, and that its activity will continue through eternity. It is like the sun, which, to our eyes, seems to set in night; but it has in reality only gone to diffuse its light elsewhere.—Goethe.

SENATOR WEEKS REPLIES

Senator John W. Weeks of this city has authorized the following statement in reply to recent attacks by Mayor Curley of Boston. "My attention has been called to a statement made by Mayor Curley in his court of July speeches, relating to Mexico and a supposed relation which I may have in Mexico."

"It is a sample of the careless and irresponsible statements made by such men, which are given currency on account of the position of the person who utters them."

"As a matter of fact, I am opposed to the Administration's Mexican policies. They have been from the very start ill-advised, irresolute and ineffective."

"I have not a dollar invested in Mexico, neither has any member of my family, so far as I know, so I cannot have been influenced in this matter by personal interests."

"The additional assertion made by the Mayor that I ought to enlist is a little less than an insult. I have invariably in the past volunteered whenever there has been any possibility of trouble between our Government and a foreign country. I served in the Spanish War and I am ready to serve in Mexico if it is desirable and necessary."

"Furthermore, my only son is a member of Battery A, M. V. M., and is now performing service on the border. Only those who are doing more than I in this emergency have a right to criticize me."

CONTEST MEETS WITH FAVOR

Favorable comment is heard on all sides regarding the Neighborhood Photo Contest at Norumbega. The views are being shown nightly in groups of three, on the screen in the theatre and two groups are shown each week, the first on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights and the second on the three last nights of the week.

All the views are taken within a five-mile radius of the Park, all are taken from the highway and the locations are all on the street railway lines. Those who wish more time to study the pictures than the view on the screen affords can secure them in post card form at the Contest Booth in the Park.

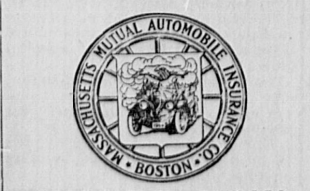

The automobiles to be awarded as the first two prizes are now on exhibition in the chalet at Norumbega.

CHILDREN'S MUSEUM NOTES

Egypt is the latest country to be represented in the historical collection of the Museum. The exhibit, while small, contains several interesting articles which are characteristic of the ancient civilization. Three reed musical instruments, baskets of the type made and used by the poorer people, the flywhisk which is in general use by all classes, a suit of boy's clothing, a silver ring of somewhat heavy fashion and setting, and two mummy masks are among the articles shown. The Egyptian case is in the northwest corner of the history room.

BOY SCOUTS

At the Y. M. C. A. camp with Mr. Macpherson this summer will be found Scouts Royal Ross and George Crosby of Troop 7, West Newton and Bob Lalonde of Troop 1, Newtonville. This will be an ideal spot for scouts this summer. The charges are very reasonable and the sport of canoeing, swimming, fishing, playing games, and getting close to nature plentiful. All scouts should avail themselves of this opportunity.

INTERNATIONAL RECREATION CONGRESS

The International Recreation Congress will be held at Grand Rapids, Michigan, October 2nd to 6th, during which much of the time will be given up to the discussion of the practical problems confronting those who are building up neighborhood play centers, and promoting play throughout their neighborhoods.

Men of long experience in recreation work will answer questions relating to these practical problems instead of attempting set addresses.

From 1,337 American cities and towns recent reports have come to the Playground and Recreation Association of America indicating that America needs a great, patriotic revival of physical education, of activities which develop vigor, team play, character.

Popular impulses in this direction are evident in the 1,337 communities studied. Never before have so many Americans desired physical vigor. They desire power and depth of life that America may be strong to face world problems.

An American renaissance may be brought about if these surging, fundamental, American impulses can be clarified and guided. To help to do this is the purpose of the Recreation Congress. Any community, large or small, can be helped to develop year-round neighborhood play centers with play leaders.

Superintendent Ernst Hermann of the Newton Play Ground Commission is in hopes that a local Committee from all the Newtons will be formed in order to stimulate attendance at this Congress and he is also perfectly willing to act as Secretary.

Anyone desiring any further information should communicate with him at his office in the City Hall.

MR. McLEOD ASSAULTED

Last Sunday afternoon, while Mr. Charles McLeod, foreman of the Crystal Lake Ice Co. was approaching the ice houses over the Centre street bridge, he noticed a group of boys and young men on the railroad track and on the Company's land near by. On investigating the matter he found that the boys had set several fires among some lumber which was lying about the premises and while remonstrating with the gang, one of them picked up a stone and with that in his fist struck Mr. McLeod in the eye, making a serious wound. The gang evidently came from out of town and had been making a tour around Crystal Lake and the bathhouse which has been so much discussed the past few weeks. This is only another incident of misconduct and trouble which Newton Centre residents attribute to the use of the Lake for bathing purposes.

Mr. R. M. Clark, treasurer of the Crystal Lake Ice Co. has offered a reward of $100 for evidence which will lead to the conviction for the assault on Mr. McLeod.

A Smiling Face Is a Great Heritage

By ORISON SWETT MARDEN.

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"I just like to let her in at the door," said an Irish servant of a lady caller. "The very face of her does one good, shure."

How glad we all are to welcome sunny souls! We are never too busy to see them. There is nothing we welcome so much as sunshine. Someone has said, "A happy human face—it is the gift that may be made by poor or rich, by old or young. It is the gift to which all are entitled, with which all are pleased."

Oh, what riches live in a sunny soul; what a heritage is a smiling face—to be able to fling out sunshine everywhere one goes, to scatter the shadows and to lighten sorrowing hearts; to have the power to send cheer into despairing souls through a sunny and radiant disposition!

And yet all about us we see people going through life peddling vinegar, radiating bitterness, finding fault, and seeing only the ugly; worrying, fretting, cynical and pessimistic! Some people have a genius for seeing only the crooked, the evil and disagreeable. Pessimism is always a destroyer, never a producer.

We need more joy peddlers, and sunshine makers, more people who refuse to see the ugly, the bitter and the crooked; who see the world of beauty and perfection which God has made, and not the world which sin and discord and disease have made. We need people who see the man and woman whom God has made—pure, clean, sane, healthy—and not the ugly, diseased, discordant dwarf, the burlesque of man, which wrong thinking, wrong living and sin have made.

A cheerful, optimistic mind is a sort of a prism which brings the rainbow colors out of things which are invisible to the pessimist.

The prism does not make the colors in the spectrum. They are everywhere in the light before our eyes. Our light is made up of all the different colors of the rainbow. The prism merely separates them and makes them visible to the eye.

The ability to radiate sunshine is a greater power than beauty or wealth. If you would do the maximum of which you are capable, keep the mind filled with sunshine, with beauty and truth, with cheerful, uplifting thoughts. Bury everything that makes you unhappy and discordant, everything that cramps your freedom, that worries you, before it buries you.

Take joy with you; cling to it, no matter where you go or what you do. It is your lubricating oil which would prevent the jars, the discords, and shut out the sorrows of life.

True religion is full of hope, sunshine, optimism and cheerfulness. There is joyous and glad and beautiful. There is no Christianity in the ugly, the discordant, the sad. The religion which Christ taught was bright, cheerful and beautiful. The sunshine, the "lilies of the field," the "birds of the air," the hills, the valleys, the trees, the mountains, the brooks—all things beautiful—were in his teaching. There was no cold, dry theology in it. It was just happy Christianity!

Refuse to be gloomy. Cheer up! Get your mind off your troubles. Do not think about them. Think of the bright things in life. Think gratefully of the good things you have. Wake up, and be cheerful.

Ancient Corn Mills.

These peculiar rock formations are hand made—the most ancient of grist mills for grinding American corn. They have been used by the Navajo Indians of Arizona from time immemorial up to within a comparatively few years. There are 35 to 40 of them in the group, the lava rock in which they have been cut being especially favorable for grinding purposes.

The Navajos, unlike their more warlike neighbors, the Apaches, have been for the past 200 years a pastoral and industrial race of Indians, cultivating large acreages of grain and an entire tribe was wont to repair to these磨s near Sulphur Springs, where the squaws would spend several days making meal. Some of the old hangers-on at Sulphur Springs say that years ago there were many pestles or grinding stones lying around the "mill," but these have all been taken away by travelers as curiosities.

Thought and Action.

We build from within, outward, but the outward growth also sends down its roots within. We act according to the thoughts we cherish, and yet it is true that our actions have their reflex influence upon our thoughts. Do you wish to be brave and unselfish?

Compel yourself to act as if you were, whatever your feeling, and your conduct will have its effect in strengthening your spirit. Do you desire to be temperate and kind in your judgment of others? Make your speech of that order and a like habit of thought will gradually become yours. The way to get anywhere is to start with the one step possible.

Regimental Pets.

Some of the Canadian regiments took their pets to England with them. In front of one detachment during the march through Plymouth was a young trooper with the neck and shoulders of a wrestler, and on his shoulder, playing with his ear, was a tame white rat. Another battalion intends to take to the front a small black bear captured in the Canadian woods.

NEWS FROM HOME

By LESLIE GRANGER.

Laura had never felt so blue in her life. The postman had just left two letters.

The one from home she laid aside for more leisurely reading, but the thick white paper of the other identified it with a wedding, and Laura opened it eagerly.

To her dismay, the names of Alex McCune and Harriet Turner stared at her from the paper. Below was the date of the recent wedding. That was enough! Laura dropped the invitation and reached for her handkerchief.

Alex, her old-time sweetheart, had deserted her!

The office, save for Laura, was empty. Mr. Jennings had put on his hat and overcoat and gone home. While Laura was in the middle of another good cry, he recalled something he had neglected and returned.

"Why, Miss Sheridan! What in the world is the matter?"

"Nothing! I'm not crying."

"Then I beg your pardon. Since you are perfectly happy, I presume there is no need of sympathy. I have an extra ticket tonight for the Lyric club concert and thought you might make use of it, if you care for music."

Laura sprang up. "Thank you!" she exclaimed, dabbing at her swollen eyes. "I guess I was crying—wasn't I?"

"It looked a bit like it. Won't you tell me why?"

Mr. Jennings' sudden interest and kindness startled her into answering: "Nellie's gone and Alex is married and I'm all alone and nobody cares for me the least bit."

"So Alex is married!"

She looked up surprised. "What do you know about Alex?"

"Well, I got to know about him some way. Regular letters and all that, I suppose. Besides, I couldn't be deaf to an allusion you made over the telephone one day. Did—did you—like him so very much?"

Laura bridled. "Well, I guess I won't die! If I'd really wanted him I'd have taken him long ago."

Mr. Jennings nodded approvingly.

Laura went on—it was comforting to have some one so sympathetic: "I don't know what to do now that Nellie's gone, I really ought to go home to the farm, I guess."

"Do you mean to say you came from a wholesome place in the country to this sin-ridden city just for adventure?"

"Yes," wondering.

"And father and mother and sister and brothers and cats and chickens and cows and everything on earth worth while?"

"Yes."

"Why did you do it?"

"I never got any clothes, and I wanted—"

"Then you were a very silly little girl and you'd better go back." He put on his hat and went out.

For the first time in her life she had seen Mr. Jennings jolted out of his well-poised, gentlemanly self. And he had called her "silly" and banged the door! He was very rude! Her cheeks flamed red.

"He needn't think I want to go to his old concert!" She picked up the ticket, meaning to tear it across and it upon his desk where he could see it in the morning. Then the words "silly little girl" rang in her ears. "He'll only think me a baby."

So she tucked it into her bag, put on her wraps and went home.

She also got ready that night and went alone to the concert.

The Lyric club proved to be a glee club, and Mr. Jennings a member. He sang a rich baritone which thrilled Laura despite her effort to find it ordinary.

Toward the end of the second half, she began to feel a delicious drowsiness. Slowly Laura's eyelids dropped and at last she was asleep, her head resting ever so lightly on the back of her plush seat.

Soon the concert was over, the curtain rang down and people started to file slowly up the aisles to the door.

At last the hall was empty, or so the usher thought whose duty it was to turn off the lights and close the doors. Laura slept on peacefully in the black loneliness of the great place.

Then some one laid a hand gently on her shoulder. She stirred.

"Time to get up, is it, Nell?"

"Yes!" said a man's voice—very familiar it seemed. "It's time, Miss Sheridan."

Laura opened her eyes and sprang to her feet. The lights were on now, and before her stood Mr. Jennings.

"Why, where did the people go, and what's happened to the music? Why surely I—I haven't been—" She looked around, bewildered.

"You have been having a nice little nap. I've been waiting outside to take you home. Otherwise you'd have stayed here until tomorrow. I just found you this minute. There! Are you awake enough to go now?"

She was feeling very little and foolish, and she had meant to be so dignified. He drew her hand through his arm as they waited for a car.

"I'm sorry I hurt your feelings to-day, Miss Sheridan. Will you forgive me?"

"Yes!"

"And I'm glad Alex got married and left you alone."

"Why?"

"Because I want to take the vacant place, Laura."

Cetrices Cheaper These Days.

It helps one to realize the South African slump in ostriches, as shown by the sale of a full-grown bird for three pence at Grahamstown, when one recalls former prices. In the early days of ostrich farming, a chick newly out of the egg would sometimes fetch £10, and £500 has been paid for a good pair of grown birds. But those were the days when one plucking of a single bird would bring in £25, and of late years prices have not ruled so high—you could get quite a good pair of ostriches for £12.

Ostrich farming dates from about 1867, and brought many a pioneer a fortune when it first began.—London Chron.

BABIES AT NORUMBEGA

Babies will reign at Norumbega next week when a grand prize show for the little ones will be held on five days, beginning Tuesday. The management will award prizes valued at $500 and for the babies alone there will be fifty awards. For next week's theatrical attraction a headline vaudeville feature has been booked in Kinkaid's Kilties, a company of fifteen people who appear in a Scotch specialty which includes singing, dancing, pipers and comedy. The second part of the act is an American review and cabaret which features Mr. and Mrs. Hart in modern dances. The usual pictures will be shown each night and a concert will be given Sunday evening.

The Neighborhood Contest is now in full swing and the prize automobiles are on exhibition at the Park.

READ FUND PICNIC

The annual Read Fund picnic for the children of "Newton Corner" was held this year on Wednesday at Norumbega Park as usual. About 900 children gathered at Nonantum Square at nine o'clock and filled ten of the largest cars of the Middlesex and Boston Street Railway Co. Arriving at Norumbega, Manager Carl Alberte had the merry-go-round ready and waiting for them and for two hours the children had a glorious time. Lunch was served by Caterer Osgood, nearly 300 sitting down to each table and the waiters and waitresses having a busy time for two hours. The children then enjoyed the theatre for which Mr. Alberte presented a special bill. The cars were taken for the homeward trip about five o'clock. Sergeant T. C. Clay and a squad of policemen took such excellent care of the party that not a single accident was reported.

Mr. Samuel Webster of Brighton stated that while going east on Commonwealth avenue a large limousine car approached him at a high rate of speed, and pursuing a zig-zag course and before he knew what had happened had struck his running board. The chauffeur of the limousine disappeared immediately, while a lady who was inside the car was helped out after smashing the glass. She was taken to Coolidge Corner by Mr. L. E. FRUIT AND FLOWER MISSION

The Flower Committee of the Newtonville Woman's Guild will begin its summer work of sending flowers, fruits, vegetables, etc., to the Benevolent Fraternity Fruit and Flower Mission in Boston on Tuesday, July 11.

A change of officers in the Boston Mission has caused a delay in starting the work, but by more and larger donations the committee hopes to equal the amount of benefit, comfort and pleasure given in other years. All donations must be at the Newtonville station before 9 o'clock on Tuesday and Friday mornings. Flowers will last much longer if picked on Monday and Thursday evenings and kept in water all night for delivery next morning.

Fruit, vegetables and fresh eggs are as acceptable donations as flowers, and if you cannot bring your own gifts to the station, the committee will, if previously notified, try to collect them.

Remember that old fashioned flowers bring back a glimpse of youth to the sad, old age in the city slums, and that the fragrant plants, like rose geraniums, lemon verbena, and sweet fern, even without a blossom, seem to the blind like a veritable glimpse at the glories of summer.

The main idea of the Mission is to bring comfort and pleasure to those who are "on the outside."

DEATH OF MR. RISLEY

Mr. William Edward Risley died suddenly of heart disease, on the holiday, at his home at 310 Walnut street, Newtonville, at the age of seventy-two years. He was born in East Hartford, Conn., and formerly was a resident of Waterbury in that State, where he long was superintendent of the finishing department at the silver manufactory of Rogers Bros. While living in Waterbury, he was active in Masonic affairs and was at one time commander of the Knights Templars of Connecticut.

Mr. Risley left Waterbury to assume the position of superintendent at the factory of the Towle Manufacturing Company, in Newburyport, makers of silverware, and he retained that position until six years ago, when he retired. He is survived by a widow, Louise King Risley, and two sons, Edward Hammond Risley, M. D., and Arthur Leroy Risley, both of Boston.

NEWTON BOAT CLUB NOTES

The canoeing season is in full swing again and all the members and their guests are enjoying the advantages of the club.

The first concert and dance was held on the evening of June 17th and a good crowd was present, despite the stormy weather. Mr. Parsons, chairman of the entertainment committee, did some excellent work on decorations. The club colors of blue and white were tastefully worked in with patriotic Japanese lanterns. Music was the best that has been heard at the club for years and everyone seemed to enjoy themselves.

There was a good attendance, good music and a good time at the band concert and dance on Saturday evening.

CRAPSHOOTERS FINED

Twenty police officers under Inspectors O'Halloran, Fletcher and Goode swooped down upon a crap game on "the island," a spot close to the Charles River near the Newton-Waltham boundary line, Sunday and arrested 19 young men charged with gaming on the Lord's Day.

The fact that the alleged players came from the Newtons, Waltham, Watertown and even as far away as Framingham made the police believe that the game was a permanent affair and widely advertised.

Acting on advice given them by a professional spotter, the squad of police, 20 in number, left headquarters in automobiles and traveled through Waltham in order to approach the game unseen. The players were gathered in a hollow close to the edge of the water, their only chance of escape being through the officers, as the water surrounded the spot on three sides. Escape by swimming was impossible as the cove is filled with long grass and weeds.

Two of the players got away in the rush, but the others were corralled. In court Monday morning all pleaded guilty to being present. Eighteen were fined $10 each. John Reilly was given six months for running the game and was also fined $10. Three others were fined $5.

The testimony was furnished by a spotter, who said that he had seen the men playing there three Sundays. Sunday there was about $300 in the game and a couple of Waltham Italians, he said, got away with the big end of the cash.

TELL HIM NOW

If with pleasure you are viewing any work a man is doing,
If you like him, or you love him,
tell him now.
Don't withhold your approbation till the parson makes oration,
And he lies with snowy lilies o'er his brow;
For no matter how you shout it he won't really care about it;
He won't know how many teardrops you have shed;
If you think some praise is due him,
now's the time to slip it to him.
For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.

More than fame and more than money is the comment kind and sunny
And the hearty, warm approval of a friend,
For it gives to life a savor and it makes you stronger, braver,
And it gives you heart and spirit to the end;
If he earns your praise—bestow it; if you like him let him know it;
Let the words of true encouragement be said;
Do not wait till life is over and he's underneath the clover,
For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS

Several Annahan Camp Fire Girls of the West Newton Congregational Church had a romantic and thrilling experience while camping at Swiss Beach, Wareham, with Miss Louise Woods last week. It appears that several Boy Scouts of a Wareham Troop had taken a boat for a short row. The boys through love of mischief tipped the boat over and were seen from shore scrambling and splashing in the briny deep. Ruth Larcom, Flora Spencer, Esther Dawire, Doris Forte, Hazel Brooker, and Ella Lalonde, pulled in other boats to their assistance. The whole affair appeared to be a joke but the boys were willing and anxious to be towed ashore by our West Newton Camp Fire Girls. This time it is not Hurray for the Boy Scouts, but for the Annahan Camp Fire Girls.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Greatly Exaggerated Reports and No Danger of This Dread Disease in Newton

While the Boston papers have made their usual scareheads over small matters happening in Newton, the facts in regard to possible cases of infantile paralysis in this city hardly coincide with the big type with which they have been flaunted before the public.

It is true that one child has died in this city, probably from an attack of the dreaded disease which has been so prevalent in New York city and vicinity, but it is possible that the cause of death may have been from something else.

Last Saturday Dr. Lewis H. Jack reported a possible case of poliomyelitis to Dr. Curtis, chairman of the board of health, and both physicians made an examination of the child, Richard, the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Baird of Brooklyn, N. Y., who was visiting Mrs. Baird's mother, Mrs. Catherine Campbell, at 36 Lincoln road, Newton. Another child, a younger brother, named Edward was also ill. Neither physician was able to diagnose the cases as poliomyelitis, altho some of the symptoms were present. Every precaution, however, was taken, and the older child, Richard, died on Sunday. The other child is apparently recovering at the present time. The state inspector, Dr. W. W. Walcott has visited the premises and Dr. McLaughlin, the State Health Commissioner, has been consulted, and on his advice, it was decided to report the dead child as a case of poliomyelitis.

Another child, Elvira Visco, two years of age, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jere Visco of Pearl street was reported on Monday by a Watertown physician, and taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Brighton, where it was found that she had a case of chicken pox.

To the Editor of the NEWTON GRAPHIC:

The Board of Health asks your cooperation in publishing certain information about Infantile Paralysis.

Cases of the disease are reported every year and there is no reason to believe that this summer will prove an exception. Indeed it is likely that more cases than usual will be reported because attention has been directed to it, but even if this should happen there is no need for undue alarm and no reason to fear a serious outbreak. Very little is positively known about the method of spread of the disease but certain precautions may be taken to lessen the danger of spreading it. The disease usually attacks persons under 16 years of age; speaking roughly, the younger the child the greater the liability of attack.

The first symptoms resemble those of ordinary summer complaint—diarrhoea, nausea, vomiting and fever—these are soon followed by paralysis usually of the arms or legs, and sometimes of the throat.

Children should not be allowed to go to places where other children are liable to be, such as moving picture shows, picnics, trolleys, excursions, etc.

They should not be allowed to play with other children. They should be kept clean, dressed lightly and kept in the open air as much as possible.

The food should be plain and nourishing and over feeding avoided. Do not allow others to kiss or caress them.

If a child shows symptoms of illness, no matter how slight, a doctor should be called at once and the child kept away from the other children until the doctor has made his visit.

If preferred, the Board of Health may be notified directly by calling Newton West 87 between the hours of 8.30 A. M. and 5.00 P. M., or by calling Brookline 1060 at other times.

By order of the Board of Health, FRANCIS GEO. CURTIS, M. D., Chairman.

LETTERS FROM EL PASO

Letters from El Paso to friends in this city say that the weather is hot and dusty, temperature about 115 degrees, and that some of the boys are laid up with the heat. The camp is several miles from El Paso and there is but little travel to that city. The men have received an outfit of two pair of shoes, twelve pair of stockings, six pair of shirts and drawers, two pair of Khaki pants and one coat. General Pershing is just over the border and not at all in a dangerous position as the Boston papers claim.

A letter from another lad states that there is no ammunition in the camp—a fine example of preparedness.

FATAL ACCIDENT

Peter J. Olson of Watertown was struck by an automobile driven by Mr. William B. Rogers of Willard street, Newton, last Saturday afternoon, when on Mt. Auburn street, near Arlington street, Watertown. He was taken to the Cambridge hospital and died a few hours later. Mr. Rogers, who is a very careful driver, was not to blame, as Olson ran directly into his machine. He was held under $2000 bail, however, and appeared in the Waltham Court Monday morning, the case being continued until yesterday and again continued until Wednesday.

SEVEN CENT FARE

Waltham Paper Predicts Increase in Street Railway Fares

"The Waltham Free Press Tribune" in discussing the demand of the employees of the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway Company for increased wages suggests that if the board of arbitration finds against the Company, that the latter will ask the Public Service Commission to allow it to charge a seven-cent fare. The article follows:

"Should the board of arbitration which will be named to settle the wage differences between the Middlesex and Boston Street Railway Co. and its employees decide that the men should receive higher pay it is likely that officials of the railroad will go before the Public Service Commission of the Commonwealth and ask for the right to raise its fare unit from six to seven cents on some of its lines at least."

Two years ago after the arbitration board decided that the employees should have higher pay the railroad petitioned the Public Service Commission to allow it to charge a six cent fare on all of its lines and after lengthy hearings before the commission the request was granted. Evidence was laid before the commission at that time that the revenue derived by the road from the transportation of passengers was not large enough to pay increased wages and a dividend to its stockholders.

The same situation, it is believed in many quarters, will occur again if another pay increase is granted to the employees.

The reason given by President J. L. Richards, it is understood, why the railroad cannot grant the present request for more pay is because it is not financially able to do so. A week ago, the employees of the road say, the indications were that the company would grant a small increase. But when the meetings of the union were held in this city last Friday word came that the company could not at this time raise the pay of its men.

Through the arbitration agreement which the company has with its men arbitration will be the next step.

VETO BY MAYOR CHILDS

Disapproves Ordinance Designed to Define Powers of Comptroller of Accounts

At the meeting of the aldermen on June 26, the board passed an amendment to the Accounting department ordinance designed to clear up the questions of receipt of bills and where questionable bills should be charged. These matters have been under consideration for some time, as there had been some controversy between the Comptroller and the heads of departments as to the authority of the former.

The new ordinance definitely stated that bills should first be filed with the Comptroller, who should then forward them to the department head. It also provided that in cases of dispute as to the account to which items should be charged that the Comptroller's decision should be final.

Mayor Childs has filed a veto of the proposed ordinance with the City Clerk and it will be considered at the first regular meeting in September.

The mayor gives the following reasons why he disapproves the ordinance: "I withhold my approval because I believe that where a department head provides for a certain account in making up the estimates for his department, and where the board of aldermen has passed favorably on that account in the budget, it ought not to be open to the Comptroller to charge any items which make up that particular account to some other accounts which were not designed to carry them. A practice of that sort indulged in at the pleasure of the Comptroller might cause a deficit in some accounts for which the department head would not be responsible and yet which might embarrass him as well as the city's creditors.

"There is, however, a broader ground upon which I veto this order. Under present conditions I am unwilling to sanction enlarging the Comptroller's power. I believe that one constituted temperamentally as he is, should not be given any more power than he already has.

"Conscious of the great strain under which he has been laboring for many months I am unwilling to place upon him additional burdens.

RIDER—WILLIAMS

Miss Helen De Votion Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Williams of Glastonbury, Conn., and Mr. Robert Orne Rider, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Franklin Rider of Auburndale, Mass., were married at the First Congregational Church, Glastonbury, Conn., at 8 o'clock Monday evening by Rev. Francis A. Fate. The Episcopal service with two rings was used. The bridesmaids were Miss Edith Williams and Miss Jessica Williams, sisters of the bride, Miss Isabel Williams and Miss Frances Williams, cousins; Miss Mary Addison Rees of Hartford and Miss Mary A. Lambert of Glastonbury. The maid of honor was Miss Katherine Williams, the bride's sister. The ushers were Messrs. J. Scott Rider of Auburndale, Stuart Stearns of Hartford, Alden Farrington of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., C. Judd Farley of Auburndale, Mass., P. H. Williams and J. H. Rooser. The best man was Stuart Williams Rider.

The church was decorated simply with white birches, ferns and roses. The bride's dress was of white satin, with train hanging from the shoulders, and a Medici collar of point applique lace. A tulle veil was worn and her bouquet was of white roses. The bridesmaids' dresses were of white net, two being trimmed with bands of pink satin, two with Nile green and two with white. Their bouquets were of pink sweet peas and maidenhair fern. The maid of honor wore white tulle with silver embroidery and carried pink roses.

A reception at the residence of the bride's father immediately followed the ceremony to which relatives and a few intimate friends were invited. Mr. and Mrs. Rider left at 10 o'clock for a wedding journey of two or three weeks. Many beautiful gifts of silver, cut glass and china, pictures and furniture as well as checks for a considerable amount, were received.

Besides the bridegroom's brothers, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Franklin Rider of Auburndale, were present, and his aunt, Miss Ellen C. Williams, Chief Justice Kent of Arizona, and his mother, Mrs. Edward Kent, cousins of Mrs. Williams, were also house guests at the time of the wedding. Percy H. Williams, who is a member of Battery A, Tenth Connecticut Field Artillery, received a short furlough to attend his sister's wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Rider will make their home in Glastonbury, Conn.

INVITE SUBSCRIPTIONS

On June 26th, Governor McCall summoned to the Council Chamber certain citizens, men and women of our state, and requested them to organize the Massachusetts Volunteer Aid Association for the purpose of helping the women and children of the men called to military service by the President of the United States, who receive no adequate assistance from their employers and to assist these men in every needed way.

The committee of citizens summoned has organized as directed and has taken up the work with diligence and zeal. Everyone has been invited to become a member of the Association by subscribing One Dollar or more and the committee is now engaged in giving help, acting only after the most careful inquiry.

Subscriptions large and small have been invited and some money has been raised, but not nearly enough to carry on the work which has been proven to be necessary. As many families are actually without food and money, subscriptions are needed immediately.

So long as our men are in service, war or no war, many of their families need help and the committee asks our citizens to send their subscriptions at once to George C. Lee, treasurer, 50 State street, Boston, Massachusetts.

EDITORIAL

Mayor Childs sides with the department heads in their controversy with the Comptroller of Accounts in the matter of designating the appropriations to which bills are to be charged and votes the recent ordinance designed to settle this purely technical matter. As a matter of fact, the statute under which the Comptroller acts, gives him absolute power to refuse approval of any items which he deems fraudulent, unlawful or excessive and if he decides that the department is trying to charge to one appropriation an item which he believes should be charged to another, he can easily disapprove the charge in the ground that it is "unlawful".

The mayor's veto, therefore, is of little value, even if the aldermen sustain it at the next regular meeting. It is also interesting to note that there can be little question about charging 99 per cent of the bills to proper accounts, and that the questionable items are usually trivial in their nature.

President Blanchard has taken a wise step in calling public attention to the fact that pupils in our public schools can purchase their own books and supplies, and thus be sure of their cleanliness and freshness. The School committee has been ready during the past to do this very thing, but it has never been properly advertised. Publicity is a good thing even on school matters.

RULES BANANA A NECESSITY

England Exempts America's Popular Fruit From List Which May Not Be Imported.

The humble banana has suddenly leaped into the limelight, remarks London Answers.

By its exemption from the list of fruits which may not be imported, it has been hall-marked a "necessity." Everybody is talking about it, and most people are eating it. For it is as much the fruit of the peasant as the peer. A biscuit and a banana often forms the working girl's lunch, while the gay and golden fruit is now largely taking the place of the stale sandwich on railway journeys.

The banana is one of the great curiosities of the vegetable kingdom. One cannot call it a tree, a bush, a shrub, a herb, or a vegetable, but a herbaceous plant with the status of a tree.

Though there is no woody fiber in any part of its structure, it sometimes grows as tall as thirty feet, and the bunches of fruit are so prolific that they are often heavier than the stalk that supports them. Of all fruits, the banana yields most food per acre. It yields forty times more by weight than the potato, and as much as 133 times more than wheat.

It is immune from disease of any sort, and no insect will attack it.

Nervous people often reject bananas that have become brown and mushy, fearing microbes. But such fear is needless. The banana is fit to eat as soon as it has lost all the green color, and remains fit no matter how black it may be, so long as the skin is unbroken; for until the latter occurs, there can be no admission of air and no decomposition.

Bananas, by the way, are good for babies. Dr. Eric Pritchard finds that a decoction of banana gruel has many points of recommendation. It can be made in a few minutes by rubbing a heaped-up tablespoonful of banana flour into a pint of water, and then boiling for five minutes.

DISGUISE SAVES YOUNG BIRD

Left by Mother for Stranger to Hatch, He Is Born Coal Black, for Particular Reason.

Born in a strange home, dressed in a strange garb, little wonder the phoe lives to be a strange bird. The male bird dresses in the conventional black, as the wedding announcements say. His wife wears a gown of reddish-brown with black girdle. The sons and daughters are born black, like their daddy. The family inhabits the Philippine Islands.

The young phoe is born black for a reason. It happens that Mrs. Phoe often doesn't have time, or else she's too lazy, to build a nest for herself, so she deposits her eggs in the nest of the yellow-wattled myna in the center of a hollow limb or tree. The myna hatches the eggs.

Now, if the young phoe were born reddish brown, like his mother, very likely the myna would be angry at the trick played on her and refuse to feed the usurper. So the young phoe fools the landlady, as it were. He dresses in black, and the myna can't tell him from her own babies.

The phoe belongs to a family of birds called the koel, inhabitants of the islands of the southern Pacific and the Indian ocean.

The Marseilles-Rhone Canal.

Completion of the 50-mile Marseilles-Rhone canal, which will permit small Mediterranean steamers to enter the Rhone river, indicates that not quite all of France's energy is being consumed by the war. A four-and-a-half-mile tunnel through the Rove mountain, the canal's chief obstacle, has been successfully bored, practically ending the six years of labor put in on this great public work. Unlike the Turkish railroads in Palestine, this project seems to have been pushed to a conclusion in spite of the war rather than because of it. Yet its advantages where huge armies are depending on water-borne munitions and food can readily be grasped. To the French canal system, already the most extensive in the world, it will be an addition of prime importance.

Lost Liners.

It seems incredible that a ship could utterly vanish, but that such an occurrence is possible is shown by the long list of liners that have been lost with all hands in the wide Atlantic. There was the President, with 136 souls on board, which utterly vanished in 1841; then the City of Glasgow, with her 480 passengers and crew, which disappeared without trace in 1854; and two years later the Pacific, which sailed from Liverpool with 240 aboard and was nevermore heard of. The Tempest, another big liner, vanished in 1859, the City of Boston in 1870, the Huronian in 1902, the Waratah six years ago, and of the fate that befell them the world has never yet gained tidings and probably never will.

Mother's Sculpture.

Auguste Rodin, the sculptor, who has given all his art works to France, is an admirer of Isadora Duncan's classical dancing. One day, several years ago, when he was calling on the dancer in her Paris home, her little girl climbed familiarly on the master's knees. M. Rodin took the child's tiny fingers in his large hand and gazed at them with deep interest. Then, turning with a smile to the mother, he said: "Madame, you are a great sculptor."

HAVE DISPLACED OLD MAIDS

"Bachelor Girl" Is Better Appellation Now Given to the Woman Who Remains Single.

Among the most delightful modern products are our bachelor girls. It has been said that a good wife is the by-product of love, and it may be said with equal truth that a bachelor girl is the result of new business conditions.

One thing, however, is certain: The bachelor girl has crowded out our old maids. Rarely, indeed, will you come across a real genuine specimen of the blighted love series surrounded with her feline pets, an authority on heart symptoms and a blender of bird seed.

There may be a few of those dear old maids still to be found in the remote country districts, but in our towns and cities they are extinct as the dodo.

Perhaps it would be more correct to say that they have "evolved" into bachelor girls. In the good old days any girl who didn't marry before she was thirty was dubbed "an old maid." She was frequently a lonely soul and took to reading faded letters and dabbled with smelling salts.

Nowadays a girl who doesn't marry is called a "bachelor girl." She has a good job and holds it down; has a checkbook, good clothes, lives in a pretty flat or shares apartments with other pretty girls, and is looked up to and envied by her married friends.

She attends strictly to business and her relatives are very polite to her because she is such "a clever creature," and incidentally because she buys shoes for their children and pays for Angelina's piano lessons.

The old maid lived in the past; the bachelor girl lives in the present and has her weather eye on things to come.—Buffalo News.

LIZARDS ON GIRLS' BACKS

Stenciled Designs on Fair Skin Is Given Out as the Newest Fad in New York

Art, literature, the stage and Greenwich village were well represented at the fancy costume ball of the Society of American Fakers, but what attracted most attention was the stencils on bare arms and shoulders of about 20 per cent of the girls.

Fully half of the 1,600 present were pretty girls, so a lot of the new fad art was on exhibition. There were little lizards, skull and crossbones, stars, flowers, birds and other designs. Some of the girls explained the figures were affixed to the flesh by a sort of sticking plaster process, which enables the wearer to stencil herself.

There were five orchestras, and it was agreed "Cy" Watrous, president of the Fakers' organization of art students, was right in saying the ball was a great success.—New York Evening World.

Beware of Strange Mushrooms.

If strangers appear in your mushroom bed, look out! A professional mushroom grower recently was badly fooled and, with his entire family of five persons, narrowly escaped death.

Hence the mushroom specialists of the United States department of agriculture have issued a warning to commercial and other growers of mushrooms to regard with suspicion any abnormal mushrooms which appear in their beds. It seems that occasionally sporadic forms appear in mushroom beds, persist for a day or two, and then disappear. These are generally manure-inhabiting species and may be observed shortly after the beds have been cased. In the instance cited, however, these fungi appeared in considerable numbers at the time the edible Agaricus campestris should have been ready for the market, and the dealer supposed it was probably a new brown variety and tried it in his own family. As a result, they were rendered absolutely helpless and were saved after several hours only through the assistance of a second physician who had had experience with this type of poisoning.

He Was Prepared.

One afternoon recently a New York traveling man called a prominent El Paso (Texas) attorney into consultation at one of the leading hotels. He explained that he contemplated a very perilous undertaking and desired to make his will. The lawyer drew up the will, and the traveling man paid him a fat fee, left the document with the hotel clerk, accompanied by conditions to be carried out should he never return, then hailed a taxicab and went to Juarez, Mexico, where he bought picture postal cards and Mexican stamps and addressed them to relatives and friends. Then he returned to El Paso quite unscathed. "It wasn't as thrilling as I thought it would be," he admitted. "But I always believe in precautionary measures."

"Mountain Sheep Best Ranch."

Howard Eaton, whose big ranch at Wolf, Wyo., is known to many Philadelphia sportsmen, told me the other day that Uncle Sam now had a herd of 75,000 elk in Yellowstone park.

"We have 45 buffalo calves out there this spring," added this transplanted Pennsylvanian. I inquired if they would live, and he said very nearly all of them would.

"Mountain sheep mutton is the best wild game food," said this connoisseur of nearly fifty years' outdoor experience. "Much better than buffalo meat and superior to bear, deer or elk."—Girard in Philadelphia Public Ledger.

A VETERAN FIREMAN

Capt. A. A. Savage Retired After 28
Years Service

One of the men who retired from active duty as a call fireman of this city on June 30 by reason of the change of the ordinance, was Captain Albert A. Savage of Ladder Company
No. 1 of Newtonville.

Mr. Savage joined the Newton Fire Department on July 1, 1888, and was assigned to Ladder Co. No. 1 as a substitute in which capacity he served two years without pay. He was then made a regular ladderman of that company. In 1892 he was appointed a Lieutenant and served in that capacity until 1909, when he was appointed Captain of the Company, which position he has held up to the time of his retirement.

Captain Savage was for three years a member of the board of directors of the State Firemen's Association, serving as one of the auditing committee, and has been secretary and treasurer of the Newton Firemen's Relief Association since 1892.

MR. ALBERT A. SAVAGE

In speaking of general conditions in the Fire Department, Captain Savage said—

"Newton has been very fortunate for the past thirty years in having very few large fires, owing, I think, in a great measure, to the able management of Chief Randlett backed by a department able and willing to do his bidding. The most expensive fire during this time and the one coming the nearest to a total loss was the beautiful Travelli House on West Newton Hill.

"The nearly total loss at this fire was due entirely to the very unusual condition then existing. This fire occurred in the night time, and during one of the worst snow storms that we have ever experienced. Very little of the fire apparatus was able to reach the fire at all owing to the blocked conditions of the streets, the chief being 2-1-2 hours coming from Newton Centre, a distance of about 2 miles.

"Newton has however escaped some good ones, as we have had fires started in quite a good many of the larger buildings of our city notably Eliot
Hall, and Nonantum Block at Newton,
Woodland Park Hotel, and Lasell Seminary in Auburndale. Several church and school buildings as well as many large and costly residences.
We have had two large ice house fires that were corks, but who ever knew an ice house once on fire that was not a total loss.

"We are now much better equipped than in the old days for fighting fires, the chemical engine is a most valuable piece of apparatus for a residential city like Newton, and with the motor taking the place of the horses on nearly all of the apparatus, and with a good force of permanent men well managed by able, competent officers the citizens of Newton can rest assured that they are well protected from fire."

QUICK WORK BY POLICE

The Newton Police made a record yesterday morning in taking into custody a gang of seven boys or young men who were passing thru West Newton and amused themselves by stealing a watch. Complaint was made about ten o'clock in the morning by Mr. William Kellar of Webster street that a boy had just entered his carpenter shop and stolen a watch, and that he had made off towards the West Newton freight yards with several other boys.

Chief Mitchell telephoned to the freight sheds and asked that the freight train about to start for the West be held awhile, as they wanted to look over the cars for suspects. When the chief and inspectors O'Halloran and Good arrived at the place they managed to get two of the gang and the rest got away. While the officers were looking this pair at the station two firemen landed at the place with three more.

The officers had hardly got these booked, when two brakemen arrived at the station with the remaining two, which completed the gang, all of whom were landed at the station within half an hour from the time the case was reported. The pair the policemen captured gave the names of John F. Connolly, aged 15, of 268 5th street, South Boston, and Patrick J. Keo, aged 17, living at 63 5th street, South Boston.
Connolly had the watch alleged to have been taken from the carpenter shop.

The trio captured by the firemen gave their names as John Cain, aged 15, of 44 West 6th street, South Boston; Charles Bohannon, aged 17, of 76 Forbes street, Jamaica Plain, and Thomas H. Burke, aged 14, of 71 Bowen street, South Boston, while the pair caught by the railroad men gave their names as Charles G. Houser, aged 17, of 65 Round Hill street, Roxbury, and Thomas J. Mackin, aged 18, of 21 Kenney street, Jamaica Plain.

In court this morning, Connolly, whose real name is said to be George Flaherty was fined $15 for stealing the watch and all of the seven were fined $3.00 each for trespass.

CAMP FRANK A. DAY OPENS PROSPITIOUSLY

The Newton Y. M. C. A. has discovered a gold mine, or rather its equivalent in value, an ideal, nay, almost perfect, site for a boys' camp. This Eldorado is located on a pine-covered eminence overlooking the beautiful Quicumquasit Lake, four miles from the station of East Brookfield, Mass. In that sequestered spot last Thursday afternoon, William Macpherson, physical director of the Y. M. C. A., and nine campers officially opened the new Frank A. Day Camp.

According to the oft-expressed consensus of opinion of the fortunate charter members of this establishment, nothing essential to a modern boys' camp is lacking. In the large, stately pine grove, surrounded on three sides by the wooded lake is a huge pavilion, containing a dining hall which could easily accommodate three hundred, a kitchen, two bowling alleys in good condition, and four small rooms. A few rods distant are the sites of three fourteen by fourteen tents looking down upon the picturesque lake. Beside them is an open plot which is soon to be fitted up for basketball and volleyball. The baseball team, such as it is, expects to play soon the Southbridge Y. M. C. A. camp on a field located on the nearest farm a short distance from camp.

Reached by a long series of steps is a large sandy beach on which the campus at once erected a diving wharf. Two rowboats and three canoes form the flotilla which can be used for long trips on several connecting lakes and rivers. Lake Quicumquasit is well stocked with large and small mouthed bass and pickerel.

Although much of the time thus far has been given to setting up stakes the camp routine is now well under way. On Sunday morning Mr. Macpherson conducted in the lodge a service for the members of Frank A. Day Camp and the Southbridge Y. M. C. A. Camp which is situated on the adjacent Quabog Lake. On Monday afternoon two bowling tournaments were conducted. During this week the camp is planning to meet the Southbridge rivals in an aquatic meet, a baseball game, and a bowling tournament. Mr. Macpherson also intends to lead an overnight canoe trip in the near future.

Besides Mr. Macpherson the following campers arrived Thursday: Carl Kepner and Eaton Webber, leaders; Robert Rhodes, bugler; Walter Macdonald, clerk; George Crosby, Kenneth Kepner, Royal Ross, Robert Woodworth and Raymond Woolston, Charlie Crane and Lenox Rhodes arrived Monday noon, and several other neophytes are expected soon. Although camp was originally scheduled until July 20, it will keep open throughout the month if enough campers desire to stay. Any other boys who would like to spend a part of the month in camp should make arrangements at once at the Y. M. C. A. office. A bicycle trip from Newton to camp is being planned for the coming week end.

DEATH OF MR. BATES

Mr. David Bates, a resident of this city for nearly forty years, died early Friday morning at his home on Hartford street, Newton Highlands after a long period of failing health. Mr. Bates was born in Cohasset, Mass., February 15, 1845, and at the age of twenty years entered the banking business in Boston, first in the Maverick National Bank, then with the Old Boston National Bank, and later with the Shawmut National Bank. For many years he has been with the Federal Trust Company, first as treasurer and later as secretary and actuary. He was a member of the Bank Officers Association of Massachusetts, the Bank Cashiers Association, and was prominent in the Masonic order, being a past master of Konohansett Lodge of Cohasset, a member of Newton Royal Arch Chapter, and of Gethsemane Commandery, Knights Templar, and treasurer of Cryptic Council, and had taken the 33rd degree in the Massachusetts Consistory. Mr. Bates is survived by a widow, a son, Mr. David Ray Bates, and a daughter, Miss Miriam F. Bates of Newton Highlands.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at his late home in charge of Rev. George G. Phipps. There was a profusion of flowers and a male quartet sang "Lead, Kindly Light" and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." The bearers were Hon. J. H. O'Neill, president of the Federal Trust Company; S. A. Merrill, treasurer; W. J. Carlin, chairman of the board of directors; F. A. Hunter, representing the clerks; Dr. William O. Hunt of Newtonville, and Dr. Louis H. Marshall of Newton Highlands.

The body was cremated at Mt. Auburn and the ashes buried at Cohasset.

SWORD FLIES INTO AUDIENCE

Weapon Slips From Actor's Hand in New York Theater—Pins Woman's Dress to Seat.

Lou Tellegen's trusty sword always has terrorized his rivals in "A King of Nowhere," at the Thirty-ninth street Theater, but recently it frightened the spectators into gasps of "oh's" and "ah's" and brought the performance of the romantic comedy to a full stop.

In the dungeon scene of the second act, when the auditorium was in darkness, the actor tore the weapon from an opponent. It slipped unexpectedly from his hand and flashed over the footlights, with the momentum of a rock and fell with a clatter among the spectators. Its unexpected mark was the silk frock of a woman in a theater party in the sixth row. The accident happened so quickly that she wasn't frightened until it was all over. Then she appeared so dazed that she couldn't utter a sound.

Mr. Tellegen stepped out of the scene and came down in the footlights. A man in the party in the sixth row picked up the sword distrustfully and carried it forward to the star.

"Anyone hurt?" asked the star excitedly.

"No," replied the impromptu courier with the sword; "no casualties, but many frightened." Mr. Tellegen was greatly relieved and after expressing his thanks for the return of the weapon, the scene was resumed.

But at least one theatergoer will not attend another sword play this season.

COULD YOU STAND THE TEST?

War Correspondent Makes Comparison of American Citizens With the Soldiers of Europe.

Gentle reader, queries Robert R. McCormick in the Century, if you are a young man of military age, do you feel that you could stand in your place in a squad trench and do your duty as muzhiks and other peasants of monarchical Europe have frequently done? My own opinion of you is that you could not, and my opinion has the strength of a conviction, I do not care whether you are a clerk or a college professor, a lawyer or a laborer.

Suppose you were advancing in open order of attack, and had reached a point where, with your captain killed, your platoon commander wounded, your line, unable to go forward, was lying in the open, and your only chance for life was to find the range of the enemy and shoot at him so correctly that he in turn could no longer shoot correctly at you. Would you listen to the orders of your corporal? Would you take the range he gave you, carefully adjust your sight, and fire every shot as carefully as if you were trying to ring a cane at Coney Island or make a new step in a dance? No, you could not do it, and failing to do it, you would be killed by some peasant of the type that you see working on the railroad track or mixing concrete for the foundation of the road on which you run your automobile. He is a better soldier than you are.

City That Jack Built.

In the zinc mining districts the zinc ore as it comes from the mines is known as "jack." There are several varieties of "jack," each with its own special name and miners can identify each of them at sight. Joplin, the business and financial center of the southwest Missouri lead and zinc district, is now going to give "jack" due credit for the prosperity of the town and the district. A contract has been let for an electric sign, 40 feet long and 20 feet high, to be erected at the union station of the city. On the side of the sign facing the station there will appear in gigantic letters the legend: "The City of Joplin That Jack Built." On the other side will be the names of several railroads entering the city. The sign will cost $5,000 and will be in red, green and white lights, the colors of railroad signals.—Wall Street Journal.

An Irish Name.

Francis O'Sullivan, the author of "The Portion of a Champion" (Scribner), the romance of pagan Ireland, thus explains the peculiar way in which he writes his name: The "o," he says, is not a contraction of "of," as popularly supposed. It is a corruption of the Irish "u" meaning "the descendant of." Also the "o" should not be capitalized except when the Christian name is omitted. The word "tighe," following the name signifies "of the house," and is the traditional designation of the family, as distinguished from others of the O'Sullivan clan. In private life the author is just plain Sullivan—Francis P. Sullivan—but to print it so on the title page of a fifth-century Celtic romance would, he holds, have been an anachronism.

Black Cat in Four Wrecks.

One closed Northern Pacific freight car, in which a black cat was locked at Auburn, was held responsible a few days ago for four accidents. The train had two derailments on the west side of the mountains, the same car figuring in both.

The ill-omened car jumped the rails in the Roza canyon and spilled a shipment of flour and automobiles. After passing this city it caused another wreck in the lower valley.

When the car was opened at Pasco the cat leaped out and disappeared, and no more trouble was encountered.—North Yakima (Wash.) Dispatch to Portland Oregonian.

NEWTON FREE LIBRARY

"There are singularly few books having anything like an authoritative character on modern Mexico," says the latest number of "The New York Times Book Review." "Of the Mexico of several centuries ago, the Mexico of the Conquistadores, of the Aztecs and Toltecs, there is a comparatively abundant literature. This is strikingly exemplified in the catalogue that is given the seeker for information regarding Mexico at the New York Public Library. There are thousands of titles in the latter's Mexican collection, comprising many rare volumes and manuscripts that would be difficult, in some instances, to duplicate elsewhere; but they all have to do with the Mexico of antiquity, the wonderland of Indian legend and early Spanish adventure so dear to the antiquarian, the source and inspiration of Prescott's fascinating history. The books that supply the American reader with the historical details of the growth and development of the nation since the era of the conquest, depicting modern Mexico, are much more difficult to find. Although there are not many recent books some of them are well worth reading. An excellent view, for instance, of our relations with Mexico from 1821 to 1848 is given by Mr. Rives in his "The United States and Mexico," (JZ9S.R52) while other works, like Flandrau's "Viva Mexico!" (G95.F61) and the books by C. R. Enock, "Mexico, its ancient and modern civilization," (F95.E59) and by Percy F. Martin, "Mexico of the twentieth century," (G95.M36), bring the subject down to the present time. In spite of its wealth of romance and its scenic beauty few of our well-known writers have taken Mexico for their theme. The late F. Hopkinson Smith has given us a delightful volume of Mexican travel, "A white umbrella in Mexico," (G95.S64). Thomas A. Janvier has gathered many Mexican legends and sketched the life of the country as it was a quarter of a century ago, in "The Aztec treasure house," (J2694 a). In fiction there is Lew Wallace's "The fair God," (W155 f), and a vivid glimpse of the Mexican war in Mrs. Watt's "Nathan Burke" (W3349 n). "Insurgent Mexico," (F958.R25) by John Reed and a very new book "A diplomat's wife in Mexico," by Mrs. Edith O'Shaughnessy, (F958.O82) might well be added to this list. These are indeed noteworthy. The wonder is that more writers have not chosen Mexico for their theme.

to lounge in the boats and watch the movies.

In case of rain the performance will be given on the next pleasant weekday evening.

Bancroft L. Goodwin, treasurer of the Club has been in Baltimore all this week attending the Elks' Convention.

Several of the members have received cards from President Walter Barrows, who is Quarter Master Sargeant in Company C, Fifth Regiment now "Somewhere in Texas."

The display flags which the Club recently purchased give a naval touch to the appearance of the Club House. Forty flags are suspended diagonally from the peak of the center flag pole and they attract a lot of attention.

Because of the sudden storms the Club rooms up stairs have been the mecca of several parties for lunches which other wise would have been eaten in the pouring rain. Quite a number of impromptu parties have been held by Adam Craig, H. C. Badger, George Merrill and Alfred Sweet. Informal dances and unique entertainments have been given on the spur of the moment.

Many of the members would like to change places these days with Ben Hammond, the genial janitor. While they are sweltering in Boston he is enjoying the cool breezes of the river from the float. Ben is a landmark on the river and without him there would be a great deal missing.

A FALSE ALARM

Residents of Eddy street and vicinity were treated to all the excitement of a burglar scare about 9.30 Saturday night. About that hour, a neighbor of C. P. Sanger of 67 Eddy street detected a man opening the bulkhead door. He saw him pass into the cellar and lock the bulkhead behind him. In a few minutes the movements of the intruder could be followed by the flashes of a light which he carried.

The neighbor, knowing the Sanger family were away, telephoned the Newton police.

Six patrolmen and a sergeant were dispatched to the house. A crowd of nearly 200 gathered in the street as the officers surrounded the house. One of the policemen banged on the front door and, to his surprise, a young man opened it and received him. The man inside appeared more astonished than the policemen or the crowd. Although the officers were skeptical of his story, which was to the effect that he had returned for some clothing for the Sanger family, he was finally identified as a nephew of the Sangers, and the police returned to headquarters and the crowd dispersed.

OUR NATIONAL PARKS

Interior Dept. Ready to Give Full Information to Anyone Interested

The national parks are areas which Congress has set apart, because of extraordinary scenic beauty, remarkable phenomena or other unusual qualification, for the use and enjoyment of the people for all time. They are administered by the Department of the Interior.

These are not parks in the common meaning of the word. They are not beautiful tracts of cultivated country with smooth lawns and winding paths like Central Park in New York, or Lincoln Park in Chicago, or Golden Gate Park in San Francisco. They are, on the contrary, large areas which nature, not man, has made beautiful and which the hand of man alters only enough to provide roads to enter them, trails to penetrate their fastnesses, and hotels and camps to live in.

There are fourteen national parks of which eight are of the first order of size and scenic magnificence—which means a great deal in a land so beautiful as ours. Every person living in the United States ought to know much about these eight national parks and ought to visit them when possible, for, considered together, they contain more features of conspicuous grandeur than are readily accessible in all the rest of the world together; while, considered individually, there are few, if any, celebrated scenic places within easy reach abroad which are not equalled or excelled in America. Even the far-famed Swiss Alps are equalled and, some travelers believe, excelled by the scenery of several of our own national parks.

We have said that in some respects American scenery is unequalled abroad. There are more geysers of large size in our Yellowstone National Park, for instance, than in all the rest of the world together, the nearest approach being the geyser fields of Iceland and far New Zealand. Again, it is conceded the world over that there is no valley in existence so strikingly beautiful as our Yosemite Valley, and nowhere else can be found a canyon of such size and exquisite coloring as our Grand Canyon of the Colorado. In the Sequoia National Park grow trees so huge and old that none quite compare with them. These are well-known facts with which every American ought to be familiar.

The eight national parks of the first order are the Mount Rainier National Park in Washington, the Crater Lake National Park in Oregon, the Yosemite and Sequoia National Parks in California, the Glacier National Park, in Montana, the Yellowstone National Park, principally in Wyoming, and the Grand Teton National Park in Idaho. With these must be classed the Grand Canyon of the Colorado in Arizona, which, though still remaining a national monument, is one of the great wonders of the world.

The principal difference between a national monument and a national park is that the former has merely been made safe from encroachment by private interests and enterprise, while the latter is also in process of development by roads and trails and hotels, so as to become a convenient resort for the people to visit and enjoy.

One of the striking and interesting features of the eight greater national parks of our country is that each one of them is quite different from all the others; each has a marked personality of its own.

Mount Rainier, for instance, is an extinct volcano down the sides of which flow twenty-eight glaciers, or rivers of ice.

Crater Lake fills with water of astonishing blue the hole left when the top of Mount Mazama, another volcano in the same chain as Mount Rainier, was swallowed up in some far distant past.

The Yosemite National Park, in addition to its celebrated Yosemite Valley and lofty waterfalls, has in the north a river called the Tuolumne which spouts wheels of water fifty feet and more into the air. It has great areas of snow-topped mountains.

The Sequoia National Park contains more than a million sequoia trees, of which 12,000 are more than ten feet in diameter, and some twice that and several from twenty-five to thirty-six feet from side to side. Measure thirty-six feet on the sidewalk and see what that means. Some of these trees are older than human history.

The Glacier National Park was made by the earth cracking in some far distant time and one side thrusting up and overlapping the other. It has cliffs several thousand feet high and more than sixty glaciers feed hundreds of lakes. One lake floats icebergs all summer. This scenery is truly Alpine.

The Yellowstone National Park, beside its geysers, has many hot springs which bubble and hiss from the highly colored mineral deposits. It has a canyon gorgeous with all the colors and shades of the rainbow, and it is literally the greatest wild animal preserve in the world.

The Rocky Mountain National Park straddles the Continental Divide at a lofty height, with snow-capped mountains extending from end to end. Its glacier records are remarkable.

The Mesa Verde National Park hides in its barren canyons the well-preserved ruins of a civilization which passed out of existence so many centuries ago that not even tradition recalls its people.

It will be seen that one may visit a new national park each year for nearly a decade and see something quite new and remarkable at each visit.

These national parks are located upon lines of railways and are easily and comfortably reached from any part of the United States. Each of them is in charge of a resident supervisor who has under his charge enough park rangers to protect the forests from fire, the wild animals from hunters, and the visitors from harm.

There are good roads in all of these parks, and hotels and public camps where visitors may stay as long as they like to enjoy the scenery and study nature. Trails are built to the water falls, up the highest mountains, and, in short, wherever especially fine views may be found. Over these trails visitors may walk or ride on horseback as they prefer.

Many of the hotels are fine ones where every luxury may be had by those who insist upon luxuries even in the wilderness. There are often cheaper hotels also, and in the great public camps visitors may live very comfortably indeed and quite economically. One may go to these camps just as to a hotel, only he is assigned to a comfortable tent instead of a room, and eats his meals at a big table in a big dining tent. There is another big tent, usually, to serve as a general living room. At night a camp fire is built in the woods, and all gather around it to sing and tell stories. It is great fun. Many persons who can easily afford the luxurious hotels live in the camps because they prefer doing so.

The Department of the Interior, which has all the national parks in its care, is trying to make them popular and comfortable and available for people of all degrees of income.

Not only should these parks be the best and most fully patronized health and pleasure resorts in the United States, but they should also become great centers of nature study. In the national parks only is nature most carefully conserved exactly as designed. No trees are cut down for lumber, as in the national forests outside the parks, but are allowed to reach their utmost size and age. No animals are killed except mountain lions and other predatory beasts which destroy the deer and young elk. No herds of sheep or cattle are permitted to destroy the beautiful carpeting of luxuriant grasses and gorgeous wild flowers in glades and valleys of noblest beauty. Here, then, the student and the lover of nature may study nature in her pristine beauty and unadorned conditions which elsewhere exist only in the few remote lands not invaded by man.

To these national parks, then, the Department of the Interior invites the student, amateur and professional alike.

One must not confuse the national forests with the national parks. The national forests aggregate many times the area of the national parks. They were created to administer lumbering and grazing interests for the people; the lumbering, instead of being done by private interests for private profit, as in the past, is now done in the public interest. The trees are cut in accordance with the principles of scientific forestry, which conserves the smaller trees until they grow to a certain size, thus perpetuating the forests. Sheep or cattle graze in all parts under governmental regulations, and regulated hunting is permitted in season. The national parks, on the other hand, are not properties in even the least commercial sense, but natural preserves for the rest, recreation, and education of the people. They remain under nature's own chosen conditions. They alone maintain "the forest primeval."

Lovers of sport also find their national parks rich fields of pleasure, provided they do their hunting only with the camera. This is encouraged; and there are no other places in the world where wild animals may be approached so closely. In the Yellowstone where shooting has been strictly prohibited since 1872, one may with reasonable care and precaution photograph deer at close quarters, approach elk and antelope and even moose and bison near enough for good pictures, and occasionally coax bears even to take sugar from one's fingers.

The lesson of the Yellowstone is that wild animals greatly fear man only when man is cruel and murderous. Another lesson from national parks experience is that no wild animal will injure human beings except in self-defense. Even the grizzly bear, which we were brought up to believe an aggressive, ferocious animal, is found to be entirely shy and harmless except when violently assaulted. The monster cat of our rock fastnesses—the mountain lion—big enough and powerful enough to drag down a full-grown elk, is the most timid of all the beasts in the national parks, flying at great speed at the first sight or scent of man; but that again is because the mountain lion, being predatory, is the only animal in our national parks that is hunted.

The national parks cover a great area, 4,665,966 acres in all. If all were put together it would mean an area of 7,290 square miles, as large, nearly, as the State of New Jersey. The Yellowstone National Park alone contains more than 3,300 square miles, and is as big as many of the independent European principalities that warred with each other for centuries before the genius of Bismarck united them into a great empire.

Any person who wishes to know more about any national park than is here available, who wishes, for instance, to know the particular traveling and living facilities in each and the expenses of a visit thereto, should write to the Secretary of the Interior for the General Information Bulletin of that particular national park in which he is interested. It will be sent free.

1919-20 Paint

How paint, put on in 1916, looks in 1919 or 1920 is the real test of its worth. If still in good condition—not cracked nor scaled—you've made a wise selection of materials. It's always good judgment to use and pure linseed oil, mixed to suit the wood in your house and tinted any color you desire.

Such paint is the 1919-20 kind. It is tough, elastic, weather-proof and long-wearing. Come in today and have a talk on the paint question.

NUMBER EIGHT

By ELLIS DERBY.

"It's too near the prow of the boat. Aunt Catherine," Dora protested, when they had followed the luggage-laden porter up two flights of stairs and had landed at No. 8, a stateroom, the fourth from the forward smoking room. "And, dear, there'll be all the smoke, too. You can't stand it."

"Yes, I can, too. Just lay those things right in the berth," Miss Winthrop turned her flushed, beaming face on her assembled relatives. "Where's Phil? I don't dare to let him out of my sight."

Her brother, Phil's father, and Phil's two sisters and Phil's mother all eagerly assented.

"Not for a minute, Catherine, until you see him safely in Gregory's hands," said Mr. Harding.

"Now, Frank, you were young once yourself," began Mrs. Harding. On the outskirts of the "family gathering" stood Phil. He was being assigned now to New York, in care of Aunt Catherine, to another uncle, and from there to South America to learn commercial conditions in the export trade.

Phil tried to see the crowd down on the dock through the side door leading out on deck. She might be there some place. It couldn't be that she didn't care a rap what became of him.

Phil stood with his chin up, hating the world at large, wishing with all his heart he dared leap over the side of the boat before them all. But what was the use? She wasn't down there. Not a single line had come from her in days and days.

"We can go on deck, now, Phil," Aunt Caroline was saying.

Aunt Caroline pretended to settle herself in her chair. And after Phil had disappeared, there came cautiously across the deck to her side a girl. She was very young and very anxious and wistful as she sat on the edge of the chair next to the old lady and listened to her.

"Oh, you must have known I'd be sure to come after I got your letter!" she exclaimed once. "Why—why, I love Phil terribly. I had no idea they were sending him away like that."

Miss Winthrop eyed her pleasantly. "Real sweet, slightly sort of girl," she said, half to herself. "Well, my dear, Boston families are given to strange notions. They wanted Phil to wait till he was settled in business. I suppose, before he thought of marrying."

"But that's all wrong. Phil needs me now while he's trying to make good," "Pity sake, child, don't cry before folks," said the old lady, hastily producing a large linen handkerchief.

"Yes, I understand all about it. That's why I sent for you."

"And Phil doesn't know."

"He won't know, either. You're going to share No. 8 with me tonight, and tomorrow morning when my other brother arrives to meet us I shall just surprise him and Phil, too. You see, Phil's a dear, good boy, but I've always wondered about his backbone."

"His backbone?"

"Oh, I mean his nerve, his gumption. He shouldn't let the family bundle him off to South America as if he was a two-year-old. So I want to hear if he'll stand up against Gregory, my other brother. If he does, I'm going to let him have you, and I'll start him in business myself and have an eye on you both. But if he doesn't, we'll let him sail for South America with Gregory, all alone."

Not a suspicion did Phil have. Aunt Catherine decided she'd retire early, and he walked the deck alone thinking of Marjorie, the girl back in Boston who hadn't cared enough for him to even come down and see him off.

And suddenly out of the night there loomed the dark hull of a big schooner, bound from Maine with lumber.

Phil was thrown to the deck by the shock, but got up and made for the side where No. 7 was. Confusion was everywhere, people pouring out of staterooms, the boat's officers calling out the men on the schooner shouting, but he reached No. 8, and stood in horror before its splintered wreck. The point of the bowsprit had jammed through, crushing and smashing the berths and side.

"My aunt's in there!" he gasped. Then across the way, in No. 9, the stateroom door opened and Aunt Catherine stood, wrapped in a serviceable black silk traveling kimono. And beyond her, in a blue kimono, Phil thought he saw a ghost—Majorie with wide, frightened eyes, and parted lips.

"Pity's sake, Phil, I thought we was wrecked sure," began the old lady. "Ran into something, didn't we?"

"How did you get here?" was all Phil could say, reaching for Marjorie's clinging fingers. "I thought Aunt Catherine was in No. 8, and that's wrecked."

"Well, so it is," said Miss Winthrop placidly. "Good thing we didn't sleep there. I don't like to make mistakes, but we must have got into the wrong stateroom. So you found out sooner than I expected, Phil."

Phil stepped into the stateroom and took Marjorie in his arms. The old lady watched them happily.

"What shall I tell Gregory in the morning when you two run up after your marriage license?"

"Tell him I won't go to South America for the whole family," answered Phil. "We don't care about the rest, do we, Marjorie, as long as we've got Aunt Catherine."

LEAP YEAR PROPOSALS

By LOUISE OLIVER.

Hope Lambing shut the door of the teacher's room softly but firmly, and gave the key a surreptitious turn. She looked around cautiously, then started to count noses. "We're all here!" she exclaimed in excited and subdued tones.

The others glanced at one another with understanding. Hope glued her ear to the door of an anteroom that led to the office. "He's not here yet, but he couldn't hear anyway."

"Of whom are you speaking?" inquired Charity Brown precisely.

"Him, of course! The professor!" "Well, what about the professor?"

"He has just inherited a fortune, girls—a fortune—think of it! They say it's nearly a million dollars, or it's in pounds, I believe, for it's English, and they say there is a title that goes with it. But I'm not sure of that—"

The excitement caused by this remark was obvious.

"But how do you know all this is true?" inquired Genevieve Travis.

"I can't tell that. I'm not permitted, but his lawyer and my cousin—oh, girls, I can't say any more."

"But Hope, why the flutter? What's back of it all?" asked Genevieve. "You still have something up your sleeve or I miss my guess. If you don't hurry up and tell I believe you'll burst."

Hope giggled again. "Oh, don't you see, girls? He's not married!" she whispered dramatically.

"Well!" in chorus.

A sudden silence fell upon the room. Hope looked triumphantly from one to another.

Then a bell began to ring and they heard a man's voice in the hall. "We must go now," said Hope. "It's up to you girls to do the rest. But it seems to me that fifteen young and attractive women, who pride themselves on having a million dollars and a good-looking man get out of this building single and unpromised in leap year. Sh! Don't let another soul know it or it will spoil our chance. Two months yet, and let the best man win!" She opened the door and went out, followed by fourteen teachers, who smiled guiltily as they passed a man standing by his office door. John Aymler looked after them quizzically.

Hope Lambing went into No. 4 and he caught a flash of her eyes as the door closed. There was something disturbing in that glance, and he felt an uneasiness he could not explain.

"I suppose I was a bit hateful about things this morning," he reflected. "Really, she's about the best teacher in the building, but I didn't need to get nasty about the spelling. I thought she'd hit me when I tore up those papers! I wish I didn't feel so devilish in the morning when I've been out to a party the night before."

The door of No. 4 opened to let the children in and he caught another flash of Hope's eyes. He had taken two steps in that direction, but retreated hastily. "Hanged if I'll apologize! She's perfectly capable of taking care of herself. She's pretty when she's mad, though! By Jove, she's always pretty! She has a smile and a voice that would coax a bird off a tree."

The school filled and quieted. Doors closed and a gong rang. The afternoon work was on.

In the next week, it was wonderful how head dressings took on waves and puffs, flat heels grew inches high and cheeks bloomed. Smiles were everywhere—yet there was a certain exclusiveness quite apparent among the teachers, who regarded one another with suspicious coolness. None of this, however, reached the puzzled principal, who had never experienced such overwhelming attention as he was now receiving. Perplexity turned to wariness when Genevieve Travis asked for a private interview, and as delicately as she could, suggested herself as a fitting life mate for him. He refused her offer as kindly as he could, but firmly.

The next day Charity Brown, plainly and without any varnishing, popped the question. Professor Aymler retreated instantly, thinking she had lost her senses. But in the next fortnight he had received fourteen perfectly good proposals of marriage, all of which he had humbly and gratefully declined.

There was one person left. Hope Lambing had not come forth to offer her heart and hand. This puzzled him more than anything else.

One day after four o'clock he was taking requisition slips to the first floor rooms. In No. 4 Hope Lambing was sealing a letter at her desk, but her eyes, instead of flashing defiance, were full of real tears.

"It's my resignation," she said, brokenly. "I can't stand it here any longer. The whole place is hateful to me! I'll never play another practical joke as long as I live," vehemently. Then followed a confession of her plan to get even with her superior. "And, after all, it was only cruel to those poor souls here," she went on. "I'm ashamed of myself!"

"You needn't be!" he declared. "They are a lot of geese. Hope, dear, I love you. Could you take me on eighteen hundred a year and a heart full of devotion?"

"I—" She hesitated, then smiled suddenly. "Why, yes, I suppose I could!"

DINE THE CADDIES

The Brae Burn Country Club made a great hit with its caddies on Tuesday night, when it gave them a fine banquet in the Club house at West Newton.

The caddies opened the performance with a parade from the caddie house below to the clubhouse above. Altogether there were 90 in line, and on reaching the threshold of the dining room door, held back just long enough to give a quick cheer for Brae Burn. Then in they piled without wasting any more time at all.

"Wally" Rand opened the cabaret. No sooner had the big eats begun, when the musician popped up from the members' table and let loose with the latest songs. Then the little guests followed with an illustration how possible to eat and sing at the same time. Furthermore, there was nothing to choose, unless it might have been 60-40 on the "eating."

While Rand nearly collapsed from the heat, he stayed along with the piano right through. Once, just to mix it up with a touch of color, Rand changed the key in the centre of action. But Walter failed to "cross" the kids, for they came right along with him to the finish.

President Harry L. Ayer of the Massachusetts Golf Association, captain of the Brae Burn Club, waited until all the plates looked as if Jack Spratt and his wife had finished dining, then made the boys feel that it was entirely their party by announcing that he and a few other members and invited friends were there as guests of the caddies. Continuing, he said in part: "I want the young men who are here this evening, and whose business is to serve as caddies, to feel that you are a very important part of this club—that you have your duty to perform and that you are expected to do it cheerfully and well. I want you to realize that this club is a place where members come to enjoy themselves. It is the members' playground, and when a caddie can add to the pleasure of a golfer, he makes the club a more desirable place and himself doubly useful. I want you to look upon your work here at the club not only as a job where you can earn money, but also as an opportunity to learn; to learn not only what is expected of you as caddies, but what will be demanded of you in all other activities of life. There are printed and well established rules of golf which the members of this and all other clubs observe, without which the game could not be a pleasure or a success. There are rules which you as caddies must learn to observe and to practise, if you expect to become good caddies but there is one rule that stands out above all others and, although it is not printed, I am particularly anxious to have you remember it. That rule is: 'Be manly at all times and in all places.' Be manly and you will be good caddies and you will command the respect and interest of the players for whom you are caddying; be manly and you will not only be good caddies now, but in later life you will be a success in business or an honor to a profession. The Caddies' Welfare Committee was organized to prepare rules and instructions for your benefit and to aid you in every possible way to become more efficient in your work, but you must remember that they can do very little for you without your co-operation. It is gratifying to note that there is a marked improvement in caddie service, and I want you boys to appreciate that the members value this service and that they will not fail to recognize it. This dinner is but the beginning of the many things that will be done for the boys who try to improve."

Mr. Ayer called upon Manley Kiley, one of the caddies, to tell what the caddies want. Master Kiley told a humorous story, and there was no question but that it was the caddies' did want. Daniel J. Keefe, the Brae Burn caddy-master, said that the club had 125 caddies at the beginning of the season, of whom about ninety are left, the others having gone to work or ceased caddying for other reasons. Of the 90, two-thirds were new to the task at the beginning of the season, but so industrious have they been in learning the rules of their work, and following them, that in the last month there have been more good marks than ever before, and few complaints. Last year the caddies averaged, as a group, $60 to $65 per week, whereas this year the amount has increased to $85 and $90. The inference is that the improvement in service means steadier employment. He announced, also, that a caddie tournament probably will be arranged a little later.

Charles Neary recited "Casey at the Bat," with telling effect, and then John G. Anderson, a great hand at entertaining boys, held their rapt attention while he told them stories of golf abroad, where many of the caddies are men of advanced years, gray-haired and wearing long beards. He told of the loyalty of these old men to those for whom they caddie, bringing home the lesson of loyalty on the part of the listeners. He gave the boys some mottoes, such as "don't lose a ball; it means the loss of a hole in match play"; "to be 'with' the employer, but not in a manner disagreeable or noticeable to an opponent"; "to learn the rules of golf, and be loyal to the person for whom you are caddying."

Joseph A. Campbell of the Wollaston Golf Club won the boys at the start when he referred to them as "gentleman caddies, periscopes of the golfer." He announced that he had spoken to caddies before, but generally in an imperative way, on the links. His stories and poetical readings pleased the boys exceedingly.

THE SILVER GLEAM

By IZOLA FORRESTER.

"They say there's no doubt of the operation's success," Stanley was saying happily. "We're hoping he'll be able to play for the Easter service, and see the beauty of it all as well, please God."

Esther stood just back of the choir stalls, on her way into the little room where the altar hangings were kept. She could not but pause as she caught the words, and Mrs. Sturges' warm, motherly voice answering back:

"There isn't one heart that will not rejoice with him. In the three years since he came here he has endeared himself so to all of us that his joy is our joy. Does he know?"

"He is hoping, as we are," said Stanley. "Of course, until the bandages are removed he can't be certain. I wish you and Miss Sturges could come over and see him. He asks every day for you both."

Esther slipped away into the vestry and laid away the hangings. There was a small passageway that led out into the old-fashioned garden between the church and the rectory, and she slipped out that way instead of waiting for her mother and her friends.

The air was sweet with spring odors. There had been a light, quick rain, and everything seemed to exude fragrance. How often she had walked up and down the flagged walks with Roy, talking of all the things they two loved best, helping him to bear his blindness.

He had told her it was her voice and the touch of her hand that first made him care for her. These and her eager, sympathetic understanding had made them so companionable, and it was companionship he craved mostly. Their common love of music, too, was another strong factor.

But as he had grown more fervent in his love for her she had evaded him. Knowing his great love for beautiful things she believed that if ever his sight returned his love for her would die. Not that she was homely, but she was not beautiful, and she, too, loved beauty as he did, the Greek perfection of line, the rare Saxon beauty of coloring.

Roy himself was like a picture she had seen once of a young Olympian racer, tall and blond, with the Greek profile and only the closed, fluttering eyelids to tell of what he lacked. But she was little and brown, brown hair and eyes, skin that always freckled with the first spring winds and features that were Gallic in their irregular provocative contour.

She passed some boys bearing palms into the church for Easter service. There would be a full choral service, with the mixed choir, and she was to sing in the offertory anthem.

She made an excuse that afternoon while her mother went to call on Roy. When she heard that they had taken the bandages off his eyes and that he could see, she prayed silently that she might be thankful with all her heart for him and think nothing of herself.

As the choir came up the chancel steps on Easter day, the girls last of all in their Oxford caps and snowy collars, Roy lifted his head to watch them. He was not strong enough yet to play the full service, but he was to play the offertory anthem, and he wondered which of the singers was Esther. One was tall and fair as one of the lilies themselves, and one was dark haired, with blue eyes uplifted to the angel in the stained glass window above the altar. Which one, he asked himself, which of them all was Esther?

Not until there came the hush before the offertory did he see her. As he took his place at the grand old organ, she rose with the others, but when he began her solo, he saw her face, not turned toward him, but lifted as she sang the beautiful words.

"Esther, you stay and see if any of the flowers need changing, dear, will you?" asked Mrs. Sturges after services.

She was glad of the excuse. Out in the garden, people crowded in the bright sunlight. She dreaded meeting Roy there before them all, having to bear his gaze when he first looked on her.

She lingered among the palms and flowers until all was quiet out of doors, then she stepped into the garden and found him waiting for her there.

"I wanted to see you," he said simply, and stood looking down at her. "Weren't you glad for me?"

She nodded her head, afraid to speak, the color rising in her face under his scrutiny. And with the intuitive gift that had come to him in his days of blindness, he seemed to appreciate at once what her fear had been.

"Why did you dread my seeing you?" "Because I knew you loved all things beautiful, and—" she laughed and shook her head—"Roy, I'm not even pretty."

"You are all I ever wanted," he exclaimed. "Don't you know what it all meant to me, the understanding and sympathy and you—the girl I came to know so well? When I heard you sing this morning and saw your dear face for the first time I could hardly play the anthem. If I had only loved you through the human vision, dear, would that have been your silver gleam that made all life illumined through the past months?" HILTON JONES

By JANE OSBORN.

"Why the blue blazes didn't anyone see to having the new lights put in?" was what Hilton Jones was about to ask his stenographer, but just then Mrs. Hilton Jones appeared. She had been at her club for the afternoon, where she had been reading a paper on the economic independence of women, and she had just dropped around to take Hilton Jones home in her electric.

"I can't possibly go home now, dear," he said suavely. "We are right in the midst of moving."

But Mrs. Jones had her way in one thing. If she were not able to take him home with her at least she would take him out to tea, and that would give him strength for the hours of work that stretched out before him.

At tea, amid the soft music, splashing fountain and subdued lights of their favorite hotel tea room, she told him of her success that afternoon, of her speech on the economic independence of woman, on the handshaking that followed, the congratulations and the thrill of achievement that went with it.

"And now," she said, "I am going to ask you something. You know I have very little to do. There is no longer any excuse for my remaining at home—and besides I want to be independent."

"Alice," gasped Hilton Jones in actual astonishment, "don't you love me?"

"Of course, you old dear," she said. "But haven't you always had all you wanted?"

"Yes, yet it has always been mine to receive from you and never mine to give. I have never felt as if I could do anything of my own accord that money could accomplish. I have no money that is all my own. Now there is Mrs. Dawson—"

"Mrs. Dawson writes novels," put in Hilton. "Tom Granger's wife has taken to singing in cabarets, and old Tim Maloney's wife takes in washing. Which one of them do you envy most?"

"Then you don't like the idea of having me do anything for a living?"

"There is nothing exactly that you could do, is there?" Hilton said this very indulgently.

"But if I actually proved to you that I was of some business value?"

"That might make a different thing of it." And there the tea table conversation on economic independence ended. In the middle of the mass of moving Hilton Jones had to go out of town for two days on pressing business.

When Hilton Jones reached town again, two days later, he first called up his wife on the phone from the station.

"I can't wait to see you," she told him. "So you won't mind if I come right to your office, will you?"

He was pleased at this sign of impatience.

Mrs. Hilton Jones met her husband in the entrance hall of the new office building and together they went to the new rooms.

It was Mrs. Jones who seemed to lead the way to his private office and there, as elsewhere, everything was in perfect order.

"I did it," she said, "and I'm not a bit the worse for the two long days I've put in. I told the efficiency engineers to get out of my sight and I discharged the decorators. I just brought down Milly the cook and her husband and went to work. When I wanted to have the telephone put in and the manager told me that a week was the first date, I just went around to see him. I looked firm and told him it must be done, and they were ready in twelve hours. As for the lights, I sent over the workmen and watched them and told them how to do it, and when they made a mistake in measuring the distances corrected them. I had my yardstick with me and Milly helped."

It was the same way with these carpets and all the rest. Sometimes things looked as if they weren't going to get straightened out, but I knew that if there was a will there was a way, and I wouldn't take "no" from anybody. I had the scrubwomen in here last night at nine o'clock, paid each of them 50 cents extra and by midnight there wasn't a scrap to be seen."

Of course it took Hilton Jones some time really to appreciate what had happened. But as the day progressed, after his wife had left him, he found in a hundred different ways signs of the care and forethought of the one who had performed that lightning feat of moving.

That night he handed her a sealed envelope which she opened and read while he went to dress for dinner.

There was a check inclosed for two hundred dollars and the letter read:

"Inclosed find check in payment for services rendered as expert mover and efficiency engineer. Will you accept a salaried position on my staff as efficiency expert at a salary of three thousand dollars a year? By your services, which will be largely advisory, you will more than save the concern that amount, if the work you have done within the last two days is any indication of your usual method. It will be greatly to our financial advantage if you will accept this proposition. Will you give me a few minutes, at coffee in the drawing room, to let me explain more fully?" He returned to Rutland on July 5th and the next day had a hemorrhage that took him away. The funeral was held at Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church on Sunday afternoon and was largely attended by friends who have known and loved Mr. Francis and who have been interested in his promising career as a public singer. Three members of the Knickerbocker Quartet, with which Mr. Francis was connected, sang effectively and a large delegation of Dalhousie Lodge of Masons attended in a body. Rev. Dr. Geo. S. The Masons escorted the body to the Newton Cemetery and conducted an impressive service at the grave. CURIOUS ACCIDENT

Locomotive Tender on Express Leaves Rails Without Injury to Passengers

An unusual accident took place last Friday afternoon to the Boston & Albany express train for Springfield. As the train passed the West Newton freight yards, the tender of the locomotive left the rails and bumped over the ties for more than half a mile before the heavy string of cars could be brought to a stop. Fortunately, the other cars held to the rails, although the jerking tender threatened every moment to derail them.

The train was making good time through the freight yard when the front axle of the tender picked up a part of a frog in passing over the switches. The front wheels were immediately thrown from the tracks.

An attempt to stop the train, which was made up of three coaches and three mail cars, was made but it did not come to a standstill until Auburn-dale was reached.

During this journey, the bumping of the tender and the jerks caused by the attempts to stop the train resulted in nerving up the passengers, to say the least. They all alighted when the stop was made.

Several attempts were made to replace the tender on the rails but they were of no avail. The train was finally backed to West Newton where a new engine and tender from Boston replaced the damaged locomotive.

BOY DROWNED

While Attempting to Swim in Charles River at Nonantum

George Feeley, the fifteen-year old son of Mrs. Margaret Feeley of Foxon street, Nonantum, was drowned Tuesday afternoon while attempting to swim in the Charles river near California street. The boy was learning to swim and had been rescued a few hours before by his companions, and later in the day came back for another try.

For a long while he was not missed. Then, when some one in the crowd noticed that he was gone, the boys started diving for him. Others ran through the fields to the nearest telephone, a long distance away to summon aid.

Dr. T. M. Gallagher of Newton, associated medical examiner of this district, saw the crowd collected on the Newton bank of the river while he was riding up Pleasant street, in Watertown. He speeded up his automobile, drove up to Bemis and across the bridge and arrived at the scene of the accident just as the body was recovered in five feet of water by Frank Halfrey, Abram Landry, and Fountain Hargreaves, who had located it.

At about the same time police officers from Newton and Watertown arrived, the latter bringing with them a lung motor, which was used unsuccessfully by Dr. Gallagher for more than an hour.

Young Feeley was well known among the boys of Nonantum. His father, Michael Feeley, who died some time ago, was a hosiery man on Hose 8 of the Newton Fire Department and the family formerly lived on Morse street, in Watertown. Besides his mother, the lad leaves several brothers and sisters.

OUR NATIONAL PARKS

Beauties of the Rocky Mountain National Park Described by an Expert

The Rocky Mountain National Park is in Colorado, about seventy miles by road or rail northwest of Denver. Find Longs Peak on a good map and you will have the center of the 360 square miles of snow-topped mountains which constitute the park.

These mountains are part of the Continental Divide, which is the name given to the irregular line of highest land running north and south through North America which divides the waters flowing eastward into the Atlantic Ocean from those flowing westward into the Pacific. For this reason the people of Colorado call their mountains the top of the world. They are scarcely that, for the Himalaya Mountains in Asia and the Andes in South America are, among others, much higher; but for the United States this picturesque figure of speech is sufficiently near the truth.

This national park is certainly very high up in the air. The summer visitors who live at the base of the great mountains, principally at the beautiful eastern gateway, a little valley town of many hotels which is called Estes Park, are 8,000 feet, or more than a mile and a half, above the level of the sea; while the mountains rise precipitously nearly a mile, and sometimes more than a mile, higher still. Longs Peak, the biggest of them all, rises 14,255 feet above sea level, and most of the other mountains in the snowy range, as it is sometimes called, are more than 12,000 feet high; several are nearly as high as Longs Peak.

The valleys on both sides of this range and those which penetrate into its recesses are dotted with lovely park-like glades clothed in a profusion of glowing wild flowers and watered with cold streams from the mountain snows and glaciers. Forests of pine and silver-stemmed aspen separate them. Timber line, which is the name given to the limit to which trees can grow up the mountain sides, is more than 11,000 feet above sea level, and up to that point the slopes are covered thick and close with spruce and fir, growing very straight and very tall.

Just at timberline, where the winter temperature and the fierce icy winds make it impossible for trees to grow tall, the spruces lie flat on the ground like vines, and presently give place to low birches which in their turn give place to small piney growths and finally to tough straggling grass, hardy mosses, and tiny Alpine flowers. Grass grows in sheltered spots even on the highest peaks, which is fortunate for the large curve-horned mountain sheep which seek these high open places to escape their special enemies, the mountain lions.

Even at the highest altitudes gorgeously colored wild flowers grow in glory and profusion in sheltered gorges. Even in late September large and beautiful columbines are found in the lee of protecting masses of snow banks and glaciers.

Nowhere else are the timber-line struggles between the trees and the winds more grotesquely exemplified and so easily accessible to tourists of average climbing ability. The first sight of luxuriant Engelmann spruces creeping closely upon the ground instead of rising a hundred and fifty feet or more straight and true as masts arouses keenest interest. Many trees which defy the winter gales grow bent in half circles. Others starting straight in shelter of some large rock bend at right angles where they emerge above the rock. Others which have succeeded in lifting their heads in spite of the winds have not succeeded in growing branches in any direction except in the lee of their trunks, and suggest big evergreen (Continued on Page 8.)

CONFESSED THIEF

Charles W. Simms Held for Stealing Jewelry from Mt. Ida Residence

Charles W. Simms of Newton, a Harvard graduate, was arraigned in the Newton court yesterday charged with theft of jewelry worth $1100 from the home of the man he hoped to have some day for a father-in-law, William E. Litchfield, 75 Bellevue street, a wealthy lumber dealer of Boston.

He is not, as several newspapers proclaimed, a society man and a leader in the younger set of the Back Bay, Brookline and Newton. He is the son of a workman, Charles A. Simms, who is employed in the Lewando dye plant at Watertown. The stories of midnight revelries, hilarious stag dinners and joy parties in his own machine are pure invention, so far as Simms being the benefactor is concerned. He did own a motor car once, but it was far from the luxurious limousine which he is supposed to have driven.

The arrest was brought about by a Detective Agency, which for some time has been investigating the mysterious thefts from the Litchfield home. At first the servants were suspected, but suspicion shifted when a watch, stolen from the house, was pawned in Boston. Simms, as a close family friend, had access to all parts of the house. William B. Watts, formerly head of the Boston police detectives, examined the young man and says he broke down under a severe questioning and confessed.

The detective agency also says that Simms confessed that he stole $500 from the Bemis Bag Company, Central street, Boston, for which firm he once worked and from whose employ he was discharged after the money disappeared.

GERMAN METHODS

Newton Graphic, Newton, Mass. Dear Sirs:—A friend writing from Paris, under date of July 1st, adds a postscript to his letter, of which the enclosed is a copy. The three towns mentioned are manufacturing places, and anybody who has ever seen the working people going into the mills would realize how utterly unfitted for outdoor labor these people were. Yours truly, C. F. AVERY.

P. S. A most beautiful illustration of the German Kultur. About two weeks ago, a bill was posted on each door at Lille, Roubaix and Tourcoing ordering the inhabitants to be ready within 1-2 hours to leave. All inhabitants, except children, mothers with little children, and old people, are ordered to stand on the side walk with hand packages. In case of rain, they should stand in the corridor with open doors. The officer alone would designate people allowed to stay; no claim would be admitted. And the result was that 34,000 people, I am told, were sent to occupied parts of France, to work in the fields; people of all conditions, rich and poor, boys, men and young girls. Would anybody have imagined that such a thing is possible in modern times! And how many had been sent before for the same purpose! Will the world ever forget!

In the Newton Police Court yesterday, Judge Kennedy heard the government's case and granted a continuance until Aug. 16, at the request of Simms' counsel, P. S. Cuniff.

The first witness called to the stand was William E. Litchfield, from whose home jewelry was stolen. He stated that Simms was a frequent visitor at his home during the past 10 months. He became acquainted with the younger members of his family at outside gatherings and dances. During his visits he had the free run of the house, and the bathroom, where the safe containing the jewels was kept. Mrs. Litchfield first discovered the loss of the jewelry some time in December, later discovering other losses. She appealed to the Watts Detective Agency.

Simms was later called to the office of Mr. Litchfield, where in the presence of Mr. Watts, head of the agency, he confessed to the theft of the jewelry and collapsed in a chair. He later made a written confession, which Mr. Litchfield read in court. In his confession he told of his taking several pieces of jewelry between Oct. 1 and Nov. 30. He said that he pawned these to obtain money for his own use.

Max Levine, pawnbroker at 11 Essex street, Boston, testified that in November, Simms pawned a lady's gold watch for $6, signing his own name in the pawn-ticket. The watch was later recovered by Mrs. Litchfield.

Ex-Chief Watts then took the stand, corroborating the testimony of Mr. Litchfield regarding Simms' confession. Inspector E. P. O'Halloran of the Newton Police Department told of the arrest of yesterday morning, and stated that Simms confessed to him of taking the jewelry, and promised to make restitution. O'Halloran also stated that Simms told of pawning other pieces of jewelry taken from the Litchfield home.

There were several other Government witnesses, but Judge Kennedy declared that he did not care to hear any more testimony on that side.

P. S. Cuniff, attorney for the defendant, pleaded for a reduction in the amount of bond money, on the grounds that his case had been greatly exaggerated. Cuniff asked the bail of $1000 to be reduced, but instead of complying with this request, Judge Kennedy increased the bail to $1200, because of the lack of bondsmen.

Simms was again locked up.

ANNUAL OUTING

The Newton Board of Trade held its annual outing yesterday afternoon and evening at Nantasket, with 57 members and guests present. The party left Nonantum square at one o'clock in a special electric which took them to Rows wharf where the 2.15 boat was taken for the beach. The weird effects caused by the fog made the trip of unusual interest.

Arriving at the beach the various attractions took up the attention of the members, and quite a number took their annual bath—at Nantasket. The heat and the absence of the leading base ball enthusiast, caused the sport program to be abandoned and it was with keen interest that the hour for dinner was awaited. A typical shore dinner was served at six o'clock on the wide verandas of the Villa Napoli, with President William J. Cozens as toastmaster and Senator Nathan A. Tufts of Waltham as the principal guest. Later in the evening addresses were made by Senator Tufts, Representative Jarvis, Aldermen Arthur W. Hollis, and John W. Murphy and ex-alderman Abbott B. Rice.

The committee in charge comprised: John W. Byers, chairman; Harold Moore, secretary; C. F. Carley, M. H. Haase, F. A. Moore, B. M. Rich, H. S. Rodgers and A. G. Seavey.

MUSHROOM GARDEN IN MINE

Proved Exceedingly Profitable to Man Who First Thought of the Possibilities.

The queerer the place selected for a mushroom garden, the finer, it seems, is the growth of this popular table delicacy. Damp, smelly places under tumble-down back porches, earth cellars, discarded mossy cisterns and other dark, humid spots have been found ideal. The fungus apparently thrives upon an atmosphere of decadence and decay.

The last word in the mushroom farm, however, is such a garden placed in the depths of a deserted coal mine, hundreds of feet below the ground, the Illustrated World states. Not far from Morgantown, W. Va., there is located this old coal mine, known as the Pittsburgh Coal Seam in Pennsylvania and West Virginia. The mine was worked for a number of years, but its fuel production was used for domestic purposes only, being dug and hauled by wagon to consumers in the neighborhood. With the introduction of natural gas, however, the locality had no further use for the old mine and some exceedingly interesting experiments have been conducted in its depths by Theodore F. Imbach, an assistant in the state agricultural experiment station at Morgantown.

Securing a permit from the owners of the property he encamped on the first level and made chemical analysis of the rocky soil. He found that it was rich in moisture and its constituents exactly those needed by edible fungi for their quickest and most luxuriant growth. He therefore started a mushroom farm and found that the spot was ideal for his purpose.

Mushrooms now are "mined" instead of coal and prove almost as profitable. The rooms of the mine, or the open spaces from which the coal was dug, have been found especially adapted to this kind of farming. Such locations have a steady temperature throughout the year and often they are so located as to have natural drainage. This "mushroom mine" now makes large shipments weekly to the city markets.

AERO PILOT KNOWS THRILLS

Probably No Occupation on Earth Can Compare With the Excitement of His Work.

The work of the pilot of an aeroplane is a ticklish profession. The engine needs constant watching, the controls by which he dips or soars need skillful handling, and the ailerons have to be manipulated. In a lot of machines the pilot has to use his back, his hands, and his feet to keep his frail-looking craft on an even keel. From below an aeroplane seems to be forging ahead as steady as a rock, but in the pilot's seat the rocking is terrible even on calmest days.

Guns or no guns, the pilot is compelled at times to fly low, so as to enable his observer to spy out the enemy, or any other information he has been commanded to procure. Photos, sketches, and notes have to be made by the observer, and at a low altitude within range of an enemy's guns the pilot has all his work cut out to avoid the bursting shells. There is another danger in flying low; as it is the pressure of air upon the forward edge of the planes that keeps the machine aloft, there is always the danger of flying into an air-pocket, or of encountering a cross-current; and either of these aerial dangers will send the machine hurtling to earth, where either death or capture lurks.

New Source of Revenue.

The biological survey has recommended the raising of guinea pigs in connection with pigeons and squabs, and a great many persons are following the suggestion. A row of hutsches placed over the loft of a poultry house or under the floor will accommodate many animals and be little more trouble than the birds themselves. A collection of rats and mice could also easily be added to the establishment, although they would probably prove a disturbing element to the caves. With the scientific and domestic demand for these small beasts increasing rather than diminishing, the person who likes animals is offered a remunerative hobby.

Milking Machines Invoked.

Southwark (England) tribunal was called upon to decide whether the manufacture of a machine for milking cows was of national importance. For the makers it was contended that the machine enabled farmers to milk three cows in the time in which it now takes to milk one. Close upon 100 of these machines, it was added, had been fitted up in the last 12 months, and the firm claimed exemption for seven men engaged in fitting up the machines and giving farmers instruction as to how to milk kicking cows with their help.

Ingenious Ration Warmer.

An ingenious and inexpensive device, which might merit the attention of the British war office, has been invented in Italy for warming the soldiers' rations. This scaldarancio, or "ration warmer," as it is called, is composed of old newspapers. These are rolled together as tightly as possible and the edges gummed, so that they form a compact stick of paper. This is then steeped in paraffin and cut up into segments, one of which is sufficient to heat a soldier's rations. All over Italy old newspapers are being collected for the scaldarancio.

DUTIES OF OUR SOLDIERS

Strenuous Training and Discipline at the Army Posts Teach Men Love of Country.

A soldier's day is from the first note of reveille to the last note of retreat, a writer in the National Magazine observes. In the gray light of daybreak the bugle calls him from sleep. From that moment until retreat sounds at sunset the day is one of strict routine and discipline.

A rough outline of a routine day at Fort Myer is: Rise, roll call, breakfast, groom horses, fall in line for drill, which lasts several hours or until time for the noonday dinner. For the afternoon there are various designated duties for officers and men, which may include attendance at lectures, or demonstration work, board meetings, court-martial, training for extra drills, attendance at military funerals and other services, either obligatory or voluntary. At sunset again comes roll call, followed by one of the most impressive ceremonies of the day.

The troops assemble, facing the colors; the band plays the "Star Spangled Banner" as the colors are slowly lowered, every man standing at attention till they reach the ground. The sunset gun booms across the field; the bugle sounds retreat, and the garrison work-day is over.

The strenuous routine and spirit of patriotism that pervades post life teaches reverence for the flag as nothing else can do. To the man on the outside the flag means much, but to the trained man of the army it is his colors! He will live for it or die for it as needs be—and he will do it unquestioningly!

And so it is "They bend the bow and make ready the arrows within the quiver."

"BLUFF" DECEIVES NO ONE

Foolish Pretensions of Means Beyond Command a Stupid Though Most Common Fault.

Trying to make people believe that we possess more than we really do is what keeps most of us in debt.

It is far better to have a less pretentious home, and even to entertain less lavishly than our neighbor, than to be constantly harassed by collectors whom we are unable to pay.

It is a foolish idea of living which prompts us to spend more than we make.

It may be that you have never been thrown out of employment when you did not have a few dollars ahead.

If not and you are making no preparation to meet such a contingency, the sooner you get some experience along that line the better.

The earlier in life you learn the lesson which it teaches, the more profitable it will be to you, and the effect may not be so disastrous as in later years.

Other men with just as firm hold as you have lost their jobs, and it is foolish for you to think that you have a life interest in your place. Better be prepared for the changes which are sure to come to most of us, and never mind what other folk think about the way you spend or do not spend.

Be sure, anyway, you are not fooling them much, for the foolish spender is always easy to detect.—Chicago Examiner.

"There's Many a Slip—"

Few, probably, know the history of "There's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip," which is a translation of a Greek proverb. Ancaeus, an ancient king of Samos, was fond of gardening, and planted some vines in his garden. But he was told by a prophet that he would never taste wine from them.

Time went, and the wine being duly made, Ancaeus was lifting a cup of it to his lips, at the same time asking the prophet mockingly where his prophecy was now. "There's many things between the cup and lip," replied the prophet. As he spoke a loud tumult was heard outside, and Ancaeus was told that a wild boar had broken in. Hurriedly putting the cup down without drinking, he rushed out to join the hunt against the boar, and was killed. And the prophet's remark, turned into a hexameter verse, passed into a proverb.

Capsules for Oiling Machinery.

The operation of oiling machinery, especially where it is desirable that the oil should be kept from the hands and clothing of the operator, has been devised recently in making use of collapsible lead capsules, widely used for artists' colors, druggists' products, paste, etc., in the United States. The capsules are provided with a screw thread, which is screwed into an adapter, which in turn is fastened to the part to be lubricated. The lead capsule and the brass adapter make a tight joint, and all that is necessary is to apply pressure from time to time, as desired. When the grease capsule is emptied, one merely unscrews it and puts a new one in its place. No refilling is necessary, and the pressure of the fingers is usually sufficient to force the grease into the bearing.

Agreed With Him.

Farmer (to autoist who has stopped and is reading his guidebook)—What's the matter, Mister? Autoist—I'm puzzled. According to the guidebook there ought to be a saloon at these forks in the road. Farmer—You bet; that's just what I've been arguing for thirty years.—Puck.

Right or Wrong Number?

The right way to call a telephone number is to consult the telephone directory, get the correct number, and then call for that number, clearly and distinctly, when the operator answers your signal. If you do not ask for the correct number you will be connected with the wrong number.

Have you ever noticed how the mind plays queer pranks with numbers in transposing figures? It will readily transpose 1468 into 1648, or 6426 into 6246.

If memory only is relied upon, there is always a likelihood of error, and valuable time is lost in correcting such errors.

If an old memorandum containing a number is used, there may have been a change since it was written or printed, therefore the telephone directory should be consulted whenever you wish to talk.

There can be no time saved by guessing—"nears" don't count; every wrong number call is an economic waste to the subscriber as well as to the company.

The wrong way creates annoyance to the person who is called by mistake; the right way saves delay and annoyance in completing your message, and it creates a high grade of service for you and for others.

If you cannot find the name in the telephone directory, ask for the "Information Operator" at the desired Central office. Her records are complete and up to the minute; she knows every new subscriber's number, every change of location as well as of number, and will start you right with the desired information.

What Dreamers Have Accomplished

By ORISON SWETT MARDEN.

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
"The dreamers live forever, while the toilers die in a day!" What would have become of this country, what wretched conditions we should now be living under had it not been for the dream of our forefathers?

It was Washington's dream of liberty and independence that enabled him to endure the hardships of that cruel winter at Valley Forge. It was the same kind of a dream that supported Lincoln through those frightful years of the Civil war and that enabled the Puritans to see a great, a glorious country where those without imagination saw only savages and unbroken forests.

The dreaming capacity is not a mere phantasy of the brain. It is the prophesying ability. It is a faculty of seeing possibilities, a forecast of what is possible to us.

The actualities of today were the dreams which men laughed at even 25 years ago. We are living in realities today which were once dreams which people ridiculed. The dreamers were often abused and persecuted and sometimes thought to be insane. The locomotive, the railroad, the steamship, the telegraph, the ocean cables, wireless telegraphy, the automobile, the flying machine—all these were considered dreams of the insane by multitudes of people.

Marconi, the Wright brothers, Professor Bell, Edison, Morse, and all the men who have given us our great modern inventions which have emancipated us from much of the drudgery and hard conditions under which our forefathers lived, would have been imprisoned or hung as witches had they proposed these things three-quarters of a century ago.

Take the achievements of dreamers out of the world and who would care to live in it? The men who see only facts, who see only things that actually exist at any time have not been the world's greatest benefactors. The men who have seen and anticipated the civilization of the future, the men who have seen and anticipated human wants a long time ahead—these have been the world's benefactors. It is those men who see teeming cities, thriving factories upon the desert, when others see only sage brush and alkali plains that are the true civilization builders.

The greatest benefactors of the world have been the seers into the future; they have been the dreamers of things to come.

Civilization itself is largely the work of dreamers. Because dreamers dreamed we are enjoying multitudes of comforts, luxuries and facilities and useful things which but for them we should have been deprived of. Because dreamers dreamed we have colleges, universities, marvelous educational facilities, vast libraries, masterpieces, which nations envy; in fact, our lives are crowded with things that dreamers have given us. But for some body's dream the very land in which we live would still be an undiscovered wilderness. The dreamers tunneled our mountains, have spanned our great rivers, opened our mines of wealth, they have made it possible for us to travel across continents and across oceans in portable palaces.

The automobile dream which people laughed at 25 years ago is now helping us to solve the problem of crowded streets and many other industrial problems. It is taking the place of horses, making our streets cleaner and our cities more healthful. The automobile is one of the greatest blessings that has come to women in a long time, for it is taking them out of the monotony of their homes, giving them variety of experience, widening and deepening their lives. It is revolutionizing city life by tempting people into the country. It is adding wonderfully to the health of the confined business and professional man.

In fact, the automobile dream is becoming one of the greatest health promoters, one of the greatest joys and blessings that ever came to humanity.

There is a divinity in legitimate dreaming. Our desires, our longings are the prophesies of what life may be, ought to be. The great thing is to fashion the life after the pattern shown us in the moment of our highest vision, to make our highest moment permanent.

The golden age onward, not behind; The pathway through the past has led us up; The pathway through the future will lead on And higher.

Do not stop dreaming. Encourage your visions and believe in them; cherish your dreams and make them real. This thing in us that aspires, that bids us look up, that beckons us higher, is God-given. Aspiration is the hand that points us to the road that runs heavenward. As your vision is so will your life be.

Useful Instrument.

Samuel and Jake, two negroes, arranged a hunting trip, and were to meet the next morning at Jake's home, whence they were to start. Meanwhile, Samuel, passing a show window, had become hypnotized by a pedometer, which he finally purchased. He was on time in the morning, and the strange apparatus at once caught Jake's eye. "What dat?" he asked, pointing to it. "Dat," said Samuel, with a superior air, "am a speedometer." "Yeh! What's it fer?" "Why, dat tell yuh how fer yuh walk in a mile."

HIT BY BRIDGE

Shortly after nine o'clock last Saturday evening the usual quiet of Nantum Square was greatly disturbed by the shrill whistles of an engine on one of the freight trains on the Boston and Albany tracks and in a short time a great many people had gathered on the bridge and other surrounding property to ascertain the cause of this unusual alarm.

A man who was later identified as James W. Miley of Jamaica Plain, while riding on the top of the freight train struck his head on one of the large iron girders on the Washington street bridge. The train was stopped in front of the Newton depot and the whistle attracted the attention of patrolmen, Hannon, Dow and Larri-vee who, with the help of the brakeman, removed the unconscious form from the car. Dr. Eugene F. McCarthy of Channing street was soon on the scene and rendered what aid he could before the arrival of the Police Ambulance which took the injured man to the Newton Hospital where he was later identified and it was found that his injuries were not as serious as first thought to be. He will be removed to his home this week.

RAILROAD WAGES

Shall they be determined by Industrial Warfare or Federal Inquiry?

To the American Public:

Do you believe in arbitration or industrial warfare?

The train employes on all the railroads are voting whether they will give their leaders authority to tie up the commerce of the country to enforce their demands for a 100 million dollar wage increase.

The railroads are in the public service—your service. This army of employes is in the public service—your service.

You pay for rail transportation 3 billion dollars a year, and 44 cents out of every dollar from you goes to the employes.

On all the Eastern Railroads in 1915, seventy-five per cent of the train employes earned these wages (lowest, highest, and average of all) as shown by the payrolls—

	Range	Average	Range	Average
Engineers	$1641 3224	$1931	$1585 2992	$1783 2178
Conductors	1553 3004	1831	1552 2901	1642 1991
Firemen	951 1704	1128	933 1762	1109 1633
Brakemen	957 1707	1141	862 1521	973 1635

The average yearly wage payments to all Eastern train employes (including those who worked only part of the year) as shown by the 1915 payrolls were—

	Passenger	Freight	Yard
Engineers	$1756	$1546	$1384
Conductors	1724	1404	1238
Firemen	1033	903	844
Brakemen	1018	858	800

A 100 million dollar wage increase for men in freight and yard service (less than one-fifth of all employes) is equal to a 5 per cent advance in all freight rates.

The managers of the railroads, as trustees for the public, have no right to place this burden on the cost of transportation to you without a clear mandate from a public tribunal speaking for you.

The railroads have proposed the settlement of this controversy either under the existing national arbitration law, or by reference to the Interstate Commerce Commission. This offer has been refused by the employes' representatives.

Shall a nation-wide strike or an investigation under the Government determine this issue?

Substitute for Horn.

A cheap and easily made substitute for horn can be made of wheat flour and sodium silicate. This substitute is very hard and strong and, by inserting organic dye into the composition while mixing, it can be colored to imitate almost any kind of horn substance. The compound is made by mixing 10 parts (by volume) of sodium silicate (40 degrees Baume) with distilled water, and then stirring the resultant liquid into a thick paste with fine white wheat flour. The mass is then allowed to stand for three weeks, during which time it undergoes a chemical reaction that produces a hard, hornlike substance. This composition can be molded without pressure when first made and turned and machined like brass after it has set.

Sleep.

For do but consider what an excellent thing sleep is! It is so inestimable a jewel that, if a tyrant would give his crown for an hour's slumber, it cannot be bought; of so beautiful a shape is it that, though a man live with an empress, his heart cannot be at quiet till he leaves her embraces; to be at rest with the other; yea, so greatly are we indebted to this kinsman of death, that we owe the better tributary half of our life to him; and there is good cause why we should do so; for sleep is that golden chain that ties health and our bodies together. Who complains of want of wounds, of cares, of great men's oppressions, of captivity, whilst he sleepeth?—Thomas Dekker.

THE WOODLAND PARK

The Woodland Park, Auburndale's popular hotel, has been sold to Mr. J. Arcadius Methot of Canada. The new owner proposes to make this well known and long established hotel one of the finest and most complete to be found anywhere, superior in point of equipment and elegance, so that it will take rank with the best hotels in the country, and to this end no expense has been spared that can tend to the comfort, convenience and pleasure of its guests.

Mr. Methot, who has been a guest at the hotel for the past three months, is a successful business man, having large timber interests in Canada, and is taking the hotel as a side issue. He has travelled extensively, and knows just what is required in a first-class suburban hotel.

The house is being thoroughly renovated and re-decorated, and the improvements being added are on so prodigious a scale, that the application of unstinted capital is presumed. There is a homelike appearance about the Woodland Park, which is not dissipated by a close acquaintance; without it presents appearance of a handsome private residence, and within one finds hospitality, kindly greeting and the best of good cheer. The broad piazzas and screened enclosed sun-parlors overlooking the ornamental grounds, velvety lawns, gardens, tennis courts, etc., afford cool and shady retreats. Under the new management afternoon tea will be served in the sun-parlor, which has been attractively furnished with chairs, tables and rugs. The parlors, library and reception rooms and dining hall are large commodious apartments, furnished in perfect elegance, and careful study and refined taste is manifest everywhere. A long corridor separates these rooms from the Casino and new ball room, which connects with the sun-parlors and piazzas.

There is no more advantageous situation anywhere than the Woodland Park, and it is without a rival as a resort for those who wish to pass their leisure hours during the summer months away from the stifling heat of the city, and yet be able to reach the centres of business in town daily, without loss of much time or the expense and discomfort of a toilsome journey.

Its location is one of the most eligible and most convenient being in immediate proximity to the Newton Boulevard, the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway, the Riverside Recreation Grounds, Norumbega Park, Newton Boat Club and Boston Athletic Association. The roads are the finest in the world for motoring, and all historic points around Boston are within easy driving distance.

In fitting the house for the best custom of the city, especial regard for the comfort of families has been considered and in its refittings, furnishings and all its details, it will be first class in every respect. The most experienced and skillful assistants have been engaged for every department, and guests can rely on having everything provided that will conduce to their comfort and happiness.

A high standard of excellence will be maintained in the table service, leaving nothing to be desired in the matter of quality or variety, or in the style of cooking or service. The hotel will be under the superintendence of Mr. Winifred O. Sternberg, an able and judicious manager. By him the affairs of each department will be supervised with such systematic intelligence, and the comfort, welfare and pleasure of the guests so diligently cared for as to secure the approval of the most fastidious and exacting.

It has been said that a hotel cannot be run successfully without the addition of a bar. Mr. Methot will endeavor to disprove this theory. In a city like Newton, which advocates so strongly the cause of temperance, this matter of eliminating the sale of intoxicating liquors from the bill of fare, should be a strong factor in inducing the better classes to patronize the hotel, and he will show that the hotel can be run successfully by catering to the tastes of refined people, and offering many attractive features in the way of amusements.

The Casino connected with the hotel is being converted into a spacious ball room where social activities, dancing, etc., will be enjoyed during the coming season.

A series of out-door Dansants will be held on the lawn in front of the hotel beginning in August. The first Dansant will be a grand opening affair to which invitations will be issued by the hotel management, to society members of the Newtons, who indulge in the Terpsichorean pastime. A band will be in attendance and the grounds surrounding the hotel will be elaborately decorated.

The demand of the public has been for a first class hotel in this section, and with the improvements above mentioned that object will be attained, and the Woodland Park should continue to have the endorsement and support of the exclusive and wealthy people of Newton.

ANIMALS IN MOVING PICTURES

California seems to be an ideal spot for the making of moving pictures. In Our Animals, the organ of the San Francisco S. P. C. A., there appeared recently an article that depicts the sufferings to which animals are frequently subjected in the preparation of the photographs. We do not purpose to reproduce the stories of cruelty reported by the Los Angeles correspondent who wrote the article. They are too revolting for that. It will be enough to quote a single sentence: "These are only a few examples of the fiendish cruelty that animals are daily subjected to, to furnish amusement for so-called educational and scientific study and to fill the coffers of the great film companies." From this paragraph it is understood that many cruelties are practised "in the name of science," not by scientists, however, but because in that name inscrupulous men feel surer of escaping the law's interference.

Our sympathies are with the humane societies which amid great disadvantages try to prevent these cruel practices. The public is excluded from the places where the pictures are made, and though the actors themselves sometimes, when the cruelties are too horrible, report them, they will not swear to the facts.

We sent the article to the National Board of Censorship, and publish in another column their reply. What can you and I do? Refuse to attend any moving picture show where films involving cruelty in any shape are exhibited, and persuade our friends to do the same. Then write the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, New York City.

HEARING POSTPONED

The hearing before the Massachusetts Public Service Commission on the petition of the Auburndale Woman's Club for thru street railway service to the Park street subway assigned for yesterday morning was postponed until a more convenient date in the fall. Among those present yesterday were Mrs. Charles A. Brown, president of the Woman's Club, Alderman A. W. Hollis, and Messrs. S. T. Emery, H. W. Sprague, W. H. Greeley, Fred A. Fernald and General Manager Geo. M. Cox.

Too Wet to Go Home.

A story is told of a lecturer who, on one very rainy night, addressed an audience that might have been much larger without taxing the seating capacity of the hall. Naturally, says the Tattler, he was willing to curtail his address, and having reached what he considered the proper moment, said: "I'm afraid I've kept you too long." Whereupon a voice from the audience replied: "Go on, please; it's still raining."

DEATH OF LIEUT. HALL

Lieut. W. F. Hall, who, as a member of Light Battery A, fired the first gun from the Cooper-street Armory in the riot of 1863, died Wednesday at his home, 44 Ballard street, Newton Centre. Lieut. Hall was 74 years old, and had a long record with the battery and served with it in both the Militia and the Army. Funeral services will be held at the Hall home this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

There always was some dispute about who fired the first shot at the riot at the Cooper-street Armory in 1863. Lieut. Hall once wrote a paper on this memorable fight, which was read at a re-union of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company. In his paper Lieut. Hall gave some very interesting facts which were not generally known before. He wrote: "On July 14, 1863, I was ordered to the armory by Capt. Jones. After due preparations we waited developments. About 7 two companies of heavy artillery arrived from Ft. Warren and reached the armory, followed by the mob. An attack was made on the armory and Capt. Jones read the riot act and informed the mob leaders that if the attack on the armory was not stopped at once he would be compelled to fire into the crowd.

"Then the order came to get 'ready' and we stood in that position for a long time. Meanwhile the stones came against the building with rapidity, breaking every window in the place. Finally Lieut. Morrill gave the order to fire. Harry pulled the lanyard, but it missed fire. Then came the order to reprimed. Capt. Jones came up just then and gave the order to fire. Harry Hall dropped the lanyard and Lieut. Morrill ordered me to fire, which I did."

DON'T AND DO

Many persons regard it as the great thing to be desired in children that they should not break their necks or disturb their elders. Such persons have a thoughtless faith in the educational virtue of "Don't." They fancy that the child is merely to be prevented from doing something injurious. "Annie," said a mother to her daughter, "go up stairs and see what little brother is doing, and tell him not to!" No wonder that children get the notion that to be good, and especially to be religious, is to be tame and spiritless. If there were no other reason for the junior department than the number of parents who are thus educating their children away from morality and religion, it would have abundant work to do. The characteristic word with us is not "don't," but "do." Our effort is to make boys realize that doing right and living a Christian life do not take the spunk out of the boy, but rather set it all free. This we do by furnishing just the kinds of activities that the boys like and suffusing them with the Christian presupposition. We not merely permit these activities, but we teach the boys to recognize in them so many applications of the religious principle of life. Christianity comes into the gymnasium, the baseball game, the Over Night Hikes, Bicycle Trips and the Summer Camp, not with a "sh-sh-h!" on its lips, but with an approving smile. The boys are shown that boys' affairs run most perfectly, and most completely satisfy their immediate ends when they are conducted in the Christian spirit. This is what The Newton Young Men's Christian Association is doing for the boys of Newton. There is no better place in Newton for a boy to find companions than at the association. About 275 boys are now enjoying the use of the pool which has been the centre of attraction the last few days during the hot spell. Every boy in Newton should be a member and enjoy the privileges that the Association affords. Boys will always be welcome at the building and any information will be gladly given by the Boys' Work Director. Only about a week more of the Summer Membership rates. Every Monday and Wednesday evening during the next few weeks swimming meets will be held for the Employed Boys' Class.

POLICE NOTES

Thomas F. Williams of Turner street, Brighton, appeared before Judge John C. Kennedy in the Newton Police Court yesterday morning to answer to charges of reckless driving and leaving the scene of an automobile accident without notifying the authorities of his identity. He pleaded not guilty on each charge, but was found guilty and fined $35 on the former and $40 on the latter charge. He appealed.

The court case came as a result of an automobile accident on Commonwealth avenue, Newton Centre, on the evening of July 6, when an automobile owned by Dr. F. D. Davis of Beacon street, Boston, and driven by his chauffeur, Williams, crashed into another machine, owned and driven by Samuel Webster of Cambridge street, Brighton. Both machines were damaged, the Davis limousine being the most badly injured, inasmuch as it overturned. No one was injured, but a mystery crept into the case as a result of the sudden disappearance of Williams, whose identity was unknown for some days, and the disappearance of Mrs. Gertrude Thrasher of 117 Fisher street, Boston, who was with him and who identity was also unknown.

The Government side of the case was presented a week ago today, when police officials and witnesses of the accident testified. Since that time, Webster and his wife, who was with him at the time the accident occurred, have each filed a suit for $10,000 against Dr. Davis for injuries.

DEATH OF MRS. WALKER

Mrs. Martha M. Walker, widow of the late Jesse H. Walker, an old and respected resident of Newtonville, passed away Wednesday, July 19th, at the age of 75 years. She is survived by one daughter, Miss Grace E. Walker of Newtonville.

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at her residence 31 Bowers street.

GRAY EYES

By JANE OSBORN.

Madge Peckham was a teacher at the most fashionable school in the suburban community where the home of the newly rich Stoneworths was located, and, incidentally, she was the favorite and best-beloved teacher of twelve-year-old Vivian, who had been sent to school because of her inability to keep peace with the gray-eyed Mr. Sneed, resident tutor of the Stoneworth establishment.

Easter holidays had come and because Madge had no family to return to during the school vacation, she had been glad to accept the task of returning home with Vivian to share the duty of taking care of the young Stoneworths. Mr. and Mrs. Stoneworth had departed the day before for southern climes to be gone a week.

Madge had dined alone with the little girls, and after intrusting them to the care of their maid to be put to bed she had retraced her way to the library, of which she had caught a glimpse before dinner.

From Vivian's few comments Madge had formed a distinct mental image of the tutor. She fancied him lean, precise, pedantic and immaculate, both in appearance and in speech. She heard a muffled step on the heavy rug behind her.

"So you are Miss Peckham," said a voice so melodious and magnetic, so unlike anything Madge had associated with the probable Mr. Sneed, that she gave a perceptible start.

"May I introduce myself? We shall have to see more or less of each other for ten days. I hope we shall get on famously."

"I am very glad to meet you, Mr. Sneed," said Madge, making a rapid visual survey of the athletic young man before her.

"Isn't it really quite a lark to be here?" she laughed. "I have never been in such a wonderful house before. It is quite like a fairy tale, though no doubt we shall have our hands full. I am sure Vivian will be docile enough, but Hildegard does not know me. I suppose Billy is quite a terror. Did you see that he had been put to bed before you came down?"

The next morning, when Madge descended to the breakfast room at eight, she found her charges already at breakfast.

"Billy is the limit," put in Vivian, with a knowing glance at Hildegard. "It is just dreadful when he is at meals. I'm glad Mr. Sneed made him have breakfast upstairs."

"I am quite sure I shall be great friends with that bad Billy brother of yours," said Madge, although secretly she was glad that the complications of the first morning had not been increased by the addition of Billy.

That first of the Easter holidays was one of those days that seems like the longest and the shortest of a lifetime. At Mr. Sneed's suggestion, there was a morning horseback ride in the mild spring air, lunch in the sun parlor and an afternoon spent first at music in the music room, when Madge and her little charges played for the entertainment of the tutor, and, later, hours spent in the library.

After the girls had gone to bed, Madge made her way down to the library, this time because the tutor had made her promise to meet him there when they parted at dinner.

"Haven't the children been wonderful?" she said, as soon as they had taken their places before the embers of the low-burning fire on the hearth. Madge had changed her simple navy blue dress for an equally simple evening frock of white that added a hundredfold to her charms. In that wonderful day she had become well acquainted with the tutor and she even wanted him to admire her.

It didn't seem at all presumptuous, but simply as the culmination of a wonderful experience when the tutor told her that he loved her, that she was the loveliest woman he had ever known and that the day with her had been the most beautiful in his life.

"And it is so strange," she was saying as they sat there in the glow of the embers. "I had such a distinct impression of what Mr. Sneed would be like. I thought he would have gray eyes, but not at all the kind of gray eyes you have."

"It was because I had gray eyes that you knew I was Mr. Sneed, then? The funny part of it is that I am not Mr. Sneed at all."

"Who are you, then?" she asked in amazement.

"I am that very bad boy Billy whom you told us you were quite sure you should like. You see, I am really Vivian's brother."

"But Mr. Sneed is Billy's tutor!" interposed the mystified girl.

"Yes, he is. You see, I cut college to go in business with my father, and now that he's made his pile I want to go back and study law and Sneed is helping with the examinations. But when Vivian, the rascal, told me that the teacher was very pretty, I just thought I'd give Sneed a vacation and stay home with my sisters instead. I knew he didn't appreciate the pretty teacher half as much as I should, I never thought of pretending that I was Sneed till you suggested the deception, and of course the youngsters were delighted to help the game along. That is probably why they have behaved so well today."

THE DYING TURK

By HENRY SMITH.

Tash-Kishla hospital is not a pretty place at best; and ward 22 was the dreariest and dustiest of all. The long dormitory was nearly empty, and the waving shadows of trees outside floated quietly to and fro on the grimy walls and the floor, still damp from its morning cleaning. For it was very bright outside, and most of the men were in the courtyard or visiting friends in the sunnier wards.

On one dirty bed a small group was engrossed in a quiet game of "scam-ble," forbidden to soldiers like all card games, but winked at in the hospital. Players and onlookers were silent and intent, for the Turk takes life and its scant pleasures seriously. On another bed a young man whose lined face showed the recent agonies of tetanus lay dreamily gazing at a red rose and singing to himself the refrain of an Anatolian love song. Bed No. 27, too, was occupied by something that stirred uneasily and moaned.

A nurse came in with a large green; the men glanced up from the game a moment. They understood. Then a player snapped down his card and the game resumed.

No. 27 did not understand why the screen was put around his bed, for the hospital and its ways were strange to him. Perhaps he did not see it. His eyes stared upward so fixedly.

"Allah! Allah!" he murmured softly again and again.

"He will die in a few minutes," whispered the nurse. "Hassan, a little water."

The one-eyed orderly limped on his errand, while she fanned the flies away. When the water came she dipped a towel and wiped the sweat drops from the gray forehead.

"Is there anything we can do?" I asked.

"No. He wants nothing. In a few moments he will die."

Then a paroxysm of pain seized upon him and shook the wasted frame. His mumbled words were almost inaudible, but one word was repeated over and over again, "rahah." He was praying for peace, for rest. And so he lay a long time.

From the courtyard came a song. The soldiers were singing. It was the Siliestria march, the song of Young Turkey, the song that Hamid the Red forbade on pain of death lest its martial strains should remind his subjects that they were free Osmanli, a swinging song of hope and idealism and devotion to the Ottoman empire of their hope. As we listened to the alien verse our own pulses beat stronger. But Ibrahim did not hear the refrain, "Feda olsun janumiz."

"Feda olsun janumiz," translated the nurse, "For our fatherland our souls shall be a sacrifice!"

"Ibrahim, where is your home?"

"Yeni-Shehir."

"Are you married?"

"Yes."

"And children?"

"Two effendim, boys. One twelve and the other eight." There was a ring of a pride in the faint voice.

"Ibrahim baba, haven't you any other children?"

"Yes, effendim, but the others are girls."

"Can we do anything for you?"

"Nothing."

"Would you see a hodja?"

"Yes."

So the priest came—a little puffy man, in a white turban and a pink robe, and a helpless expression. At last he spoke.

"Ibrahim."

"Effendim?"

"Have you any money?"

"About fifteen piasters."

"Give it to me. I will take care of it for you."

The dying man raised his eyebrows, the eastern gesture of scornful refusal, and turned his head. The priest walked away muttering.

For a long time Ibrahim lay very still. At last he drew his hands from under the blanket and stared at them, closely, dully, for a long time. Then he dropped them lifelessly and a strange light came into the sunken eyes.

"Ulujem, ulujem," he repeated a score of times. "I shall die, I shall die, I shall die."

"Don't be afraid," said the nurse. "It will be all right soon."

He looked at her reproachfully and answered one strong word, "Korkme-orum" (I'm not afraid).

Presently he grew uneasy. No position could bring relief. Then came delirium; and through it all he prayed for peace. Once he softly spoke a woman's name.

"He calls to his mother," whispered the nurse.

Beyond the screen the card players had become noisy; the one-eyed orderly tiptoed out and everything was still again. Ibrahim was very quiet now; he seemed to sleep. Slower and slower came the gasping breaths. Then suddenly the eyes opened brightly, and . . .

We pulled the sheet over his face and went away. The boy with the rose was still looking at it and humming dreamily. The players were dealing for another game. On the grimy walls the shadows floated to and fro; the notes danced in the afternoon rays. In the courtyard they were singing again.

LETTER FROM TRAINING CAMP

The following letter from a Waban youth now at the Y. M. C. A. training Camp Washington, at Fort Terry, N. Y., will be of interest to many.

The other day three submarines and a destroyer came over to the island in the morning and in the afternoon the submarines dove and went down so far that not even the periscope showed above the water.

That day our company got brand new tents in place of the ones we had previously. The new ones are square, and built to hold eight comfortably, so you see we have plenty of room with only six boys in ours.

Yesterday morning we only had an hour of drill. All that made any mistakes at all were put in the awkward squad. Strange to say I wasn't put in it. We have had all of the manual of arms and I like it very much. It is ever so much less tiring than marching all morning and afternoon. I'm so glad that at last Sunday has come when we don't have to do any drill at all. Last week I must admit that I was very very glad when bed time came as I was good and tired several times. It seems almost unbelievable that there are such things as mattresses, springs, and soft chairs, or tablecloths. Nevertheless I like it very much here and am not sure whether I am glad or sorry that I'll be here only a little more than three weeks.

Yesterday was about the clearest day we've had. I could see the Connecticut shore very plainly and standing on the other end of the island I could see almost the entire island as though I were looking at a bird's eye view map of the place.

On account of Long Island currents we can go in bathing in only one place, at one time. I guess that the sharks around this vicinity are another reason for that rule. The beach slopes down very quickly and the water is very cold so that we can just go in, swim about fifteen feet and come in. There are a lot of Y. M. C. A. men there and no one who cannot swim is allowed to go in without an instructor.

All the boys from New York and Brooklyn were examined yesterday and if anyone has a headache, fever, stomach ache or anything of that sort they are to report it to the surgeon right off on account of that epidemic in New York. And no one under 16 can come on the island, and any boy who leaves can't come back so I guess we are safe. I have never felt better in my life. The air is fine here, except one day when it was terribly humid. A great many parents have written to the commanding officer asking about their son's health so everyone has to write a postal this afternoon saying we are well. I thought I'd tell you first so that you wouldn't be surprised when you get it.

ARTHUR WILEY.

NORUMBEGA'S AUTO CONTEST

The fascinating combination of locating the building or spot shown in a picture with the added incentive that your knowledge may bring you an automobile, a free trip to Washington or a substantial award of cash, is being offered patrons of Norumbega park in the great Neighborhood Automobile Contest now in progress.

Pictures taken within five miles of the park are shown nightly on the screen in the theatre. Three of these are shown on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights and three more on the succeeding three nights. The prizes go to the patrons who turn in the largest number of correct answers.

All views already shown can be procured in poster form at the park so that those who, so far, have failed to enter the contest are not handicapped. The project is attracting much attention and the prizes are certainly worth an effort. Any patron more than ten years of age is eligible and the only cost is the price of admission to the park.

Mexican Mountains.

The Mexican mountains are mainly of underlying granite formation. The Jurassic, Cretaceous and Tertiary ages rocks are much in evidence throughout the country, while the highest ranges, as we have seen, are of volcanic origin. The singular plains of Yucatan are largely of calcareous formation, probably a Tertiary limestone. One of the most plentiful rocks over vast areas of Mexico, and that which forms the striking variation of scenery, is the mountain limestone, the excessively hard stratified crystalline rock of the Lower Cretaceous period.

BEAUTIFUL FIREWORKS

Many residents of this city were present Wednesday evening at the exhibition of fireworks at Braves Field, Allston, and were well repaid for the trip, for the exhibition was one of the best ever given in this vicinity. Bombs of marvellous beauty, and unexpected action vied with set pieces of handsome design for the applause of the thousands who were present. It would take all the superlative adjectives in the dictionary to accurately describe the wonderful work shown by the American Fireworks Co.

Industrious Turkish Women.

The Turkish women are to be counted among the most industrious of the earth. They certainly do a vast amount of work. They make carpets, screens for doors, workbags, horse clothing and blankets. A Turkish girl makes all the kiftika or tent domestic carpets and other household requisites before she is married. If she gets married without completing this task it is expected that she will, by her own labor, refund the money which her parents have given her as her dowry. This dowry usually consists of one hundred sheep and a certain amount of money, which a bridegroom usually pays down in a lump sum to the parents of the bride. An important part of the ceremony is to decorate a camel with the handsomest trappings, which are sent to the bride's tent. On this she goes forth to receive congratulations of her relatives and friends. It is on this she is carried away by the female relatives of the bridegroom. She and her attendants feign to resist the act by throwing raw oats at the other women.

Planting Sugar Cane.

Sugar cane is planted, not sown. A small piece of the cane, long enough to include two or three of the rings, or nodes, is laid lengthwise, or stuck in a slanting direction, along a furrow which runs the length of the field. In some sections the primitive fashion of planting in holes is still employed. When the trench is planted the pieces of cane are lightly covered with earth. In a few weeks they show growth above the ground, the germ buds at the rings having begun to shoot out in the form of young cane, the ring having at the same time thrown out rootlets into the soil. The parallel trenches are made far enough apart, say at least three feet, to enable the workers, when the wide-spreading canes are getting ripe, to go between the rows and remove the dying leaves which burden the ripening cane, thereby enabling the naked cane to mature faster.

The Rector Was Right.

If there is anyone who knows the pulse of the people any better than the man of the cloth, let's hear from him. The other day the ladies' guild of an uptown church planned an evening entertainment and reception, says the New York Tribune. They asked the rector to make announcement of it on the preceding Sunday. "This is all right," he said, "but you must charge admission." "Why, this is just a social evening," they chorused in protest. "We are inviting people." "They won't come," said the rector, "because they will think it is not worth while. But charge a small admission and you will have a good crowd." So the women gave in and subsequent events proved the rector was right.

What Are Children?

What are children? . . . Flowers! They are flowers of the invisible world; indestructible, self-perpetuating flowers, each with a multitude of angels and evil spirits underneath its leaves, toiling and wrestling for dominion over it. Blossoms! They are the blossoms of another world, whose fragrance is angels and archangels. Or dewdrops! They are dewdrops that have their source, not in the chambers of the earth, nor among the vapors of the sky, which the next breath of wind or the next flash of sunshine may dry up forever, but among the everlasting fountains and inexhaustible reservoirs of mercy and love.—John Neal.

"Love at First Sight."

Men and women differ in susceptibility to love at first sight. As a rule, man is the more susceptible. But with him there is a very mollifying circumstance—he recovers with marvellous rapidity. In fact, so great are his convalescent powers in recovering from Cupid's glancing arrow he is known to have forgotten all about it within an hour's time. And yet, while within the magnetic zone of attraction he was bound body and soul.

dust brushes rather than spruces and firs.

Still others which have fought the winters' gales for years are twisted and gnarled beyond description—like dwarfs and gnomes of an arboreal fairyland. Still others growing in thick groups have found strength in union and form low stunted groves covered with thick roofs of matted branches bent over by the winds and so entwined that one can scarcely see daylight overhead—excellent shelter for man or animal overtaken by mountain-top storms.

These familiar sights of timber line are wonderfully picturesque and interesting. They never lose their charm, however often seen.

Above timber line the bare mountain masses rise from 1,000 to 3,000 feet, often in sheer precipices. Covered with snow in fall, winter, and spring, and plentifully spattered with snow all summer long, the vast, bare granite masses, from which in fact the Rocky Mountains got their name, are beautiful beyond description. They are rosy at sunrise and sunset. During fair and sunny days they show all shades of translucent grays and mauves and blues. In some lights they are almost fairlike in their exquisite delicacy. But on stormy days they are cold and dark and forbidding, burying their heads in gloomy clouds, from which sometimes they emerge covered with snow.

Often one can see a thunderstorm born on the square granite head of Longs Peak. First, out of the blue sky a slight mist seems to gather. In a few moments, while you watch, it becomes a tiny cloud. This grows with great rapidity. In five minutes, perhaps, the mountain top is hidden. Then, out of nothing apparently, the cloud swells and sweeps over the sky. Sometimes in fifteen minutes after the first tiny fleck of mist appears it is raining in the valley and possibly snowing on the mountain. In half an hour more it has cleared.

Standing on the summits of these mountains the climber is often enveloped in these brief-lived clouds. It is an impressive experience to look down upon the top of an ocean of cloud from which the greater peaks emerge at intervals. Sometimes the sun is shining on the observer upon the heights while it is raining in the valleys below. It is startling to see lightning below you.

One of the striking features of the Rocky Mountain National Park is the easy accessibility of these mountain tops. One may mount a horse after early breakfast in the valley, ride up Flat-top to enjoy one of the great views of the world, and be back for late luncheon. The hardy foot traveler may make better time than the horse on these mountain trails. One may cross the Continental Divide from the hotels of one side to the hotels of the other between early breakfast and late dinner.

In fact, for all-around accessibility there surely is no high mountain resort of the first order that will quite compare with the Rocky Mountain National Park. Three railroads to Denver skirt its sides, and Denver is only thirty hours from Chicago. This range was once a famous hunting ground for large game. Lord Dunsinane, the famous English sportsman, visited it yearly to shoot its deer, bear, and bighorn sheep, and once he tried to buy it for a private game preserve. Now that the Government has made it a national park the protection offered its wild animals will make it, in a few years, one of the most successful wild-animal refuges in the world.

These lofty rocks are the natural home of the celebrated Rocky Mountain sheep, or bighorn. This animal is much larger than any domestic sheep. It is powerful and wonderfully agile. When flying from enemies, these sheep, even the lambs, think nothing of dropping head downward off precipices hundreds of feet high. They do not land on their curved horns, as many persons believe, but upon their four feet held close together. Striking some ledge which breaks their fall, they immediately plunge again downward to another ledge, and so on till they reach good footing in the valley below. They also ascend slopes surprisingly steep.

They are more agile even than the celebrated chamois of the Swiss Alps, and are larger, more powerful, and much handsomer. It is something not to be forgotten to see a flock of a dozen or twenty mountain sheep making their way along the blown-out volcanic crater of Specimen Mountain in the Rocky Mountain National Park.

The prominent central feature of the Rocky Mountain National Park is Longs Peak. It rears a square-cornered boxlike head well above the tumbled sea of surrounding mountain tops. It has, unlike most great mountains, a distinct architectural form. Standing well to the east of the range at about its center, it suggests the captain of a white-helmeted company, the giant leader of a giant band. It is supported on four sides by mountain buttresses, suggesting the stone buttresses of a central cathedral spire. From every side it looks the same, yet remarkably different. One does not know Longs Peak until he has seen it from every side, and then it becomes to him not a mountain mass but an architectural creation.

For many years Longs Peak was considered unclimbable. But at last a way was found through an opening in perpendicular rocks called, from its shape, the Keyhole, out upon a steep slope leading from near its summit far down to a precipice upon its west side. The east side of Longs Peak is a nearly sheer precipice almost 2,000 feet from the extreme top down to Chasm Lake, which was the starting point of a gigantic glacier in times long before man. Chasm Lake, which is not difficult to reach from the valley, is one of the wildest lakes in nature. It is frozen eleven months of the year.

There is no other region in America where glacial records of such prominence are so numerous and so easily reached and studied as in the Rocky Mountain national parks. The whole country has been fantastically cut and carved by gigantic glaciers of the prehistoric past. Their ancient beds, now grown with forests, their huge moraines, their cirques, or starting places, are next to the vast mountains themselves, the most prominent features of the region.

In fact these records of the period when this continent was planed and carved by the ice are so clearly, so simply, written in the rocks of this region that the whole story lies plain to the most casual eye.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE NOTES

Items of Interest to Friends of the Cause

The year will be a memorable one in suffrage history. A dozen years back it would have seemed unbelievable that the national party conventions would so soon be a unit in advocating the principle of votes for women. The action by the Progressive convention represented undoubted conviction. The Republican and Democratic planks constitute chiefly a frank admission by the political leaders of the country that suffrage is coming—has already come to such an extent that no party can afford to oppose it. At the conventions of 1916 the women of the country sat in galleries and pleaded by their presence and were forced to rely upon men to represent them in committee and before the convention.

The chief influences which produced the result attained did not include argument or appeals to justice, but were facts. These were the items that made the big men of all the parties think.

1. The fact that women vote in twelve states and Alaska and that men worth while pronounce the experiment a success.

2. The fact that women will help decide the 91 electoral votes in November.

3. The fact that the women of six states will for the first time vote for President.

4. The fact that our Northern neighbor Canada had recently enfranchised the women of the three great Provinces.

5. The fact that all signs point to the inevitable coming of suffrage.

6. The fact that most of the 2,000 delegates in each convention had been seen by their own women constituents and urged to support a plank.

7. The fact that the demonstrations in Chicago and St. Louis prove that women want the vote in large numbers and want it with an earnestness that will not brook delay.

8. The fact that the delegates from all the enfranchised states worked enthusiastically for the planks.

9. The fact that the Progressives had a suffrage plank was a wonderful influence with the Republicans and the fact that every other party had a plank was the final compelling influence with the Democrats.

"The teachers of Chicago found that in order to get anything done they had to have voting power behind them," declared Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, former superintendent of the Chicago public schools, at the National Education Association's convention last week. She was speaking in reply to Jacob M. Loebe's attack on the Chicago Teachers' Union.

On Monday the National American Woman Suffrage Association, desiring to help in the fight on infantile paralysis, placed its entire organization machinery at the disposal of the federal government, which is co-operating with the New York authorities in stamping out the epidemic.

The National Education Association at its convention last week in New York went on record more strongly than ever in favor of women suffrage. Only one dissenting vote was cast of the entire body. This year's resolution urges the members of the association "to endeavor in every possible way to hasten the confirmation of woman suffrage."

The Woman's National Democratic League notified President Wilson this week of a $1,000 contribution to his campaign fund, and a large number of prominent women throughout the country joined last week in forming the Woman's National Committee of the Hughes Alliance and opened headquarters in New York. The political parties are receiving more and more help from women at every election.

For the first time in the twenty-three years of its history the Anti-Saloon League of America declared on June 29 in favor of women suffrage. The Illinois delegates to the convention, which was held in Indianapolis, advanced the proposition, pointing out the great good which had been accomplished in that State in curbing the liquor traffic, largely through the work of the women at the polls.

Mrs. Adelaide Fairbanks Timmons, the daughter of Charles W. Fairbanks, Republican nominee for Vice-President, has long been a member of the Congressional Union, and was one of the first to register at the Woman's Party convention headquarters in Chicago. She helped to organize the suffrage parade in Washington, D. C. on March 3, 1913.

Both parties have given the women good words in their platforms; but actions speak louder than words, and the women will now watch to see what they do in Congress, and what interpretation they put upon their respective suffrage planks.

In Good Company.

When Prof. Walter Raleigh, an Englishman, who was a direct descendant of the original Sir Walter Raleigh, was asked to lecture at Princeton college, Professor Root of Princeton went down to the station to meet the distinguished visitor and escort him to his rooms. Professor Root did not know Professor Raleigh, but he took a chance on being able to locate him in the crowd that got off the train. Walking up to a man that he thought looked like him, he said: "I beg your pardon, but am I addressing Walter Raleigh?" The man looked at him for a moment and replied: "No, I am Christopher Columbus. Walter Raleigh is in the smoking room with Queen Elizabeth."—Life.

THE COUNTRY WEEK

The Country Week department of the B. Y. M. C. Union (48 Boylston street, Boston) is carrying on its fresh air work for the 42nd summer and will again make use of "Bonnie Bains" at Cohasset through the cooperation of the Bonnie Bains Association and Rev. Howard K. Bartow.

For forty-one consecutive summers The Country Week has been giving country vacations to city children and many thousands have shared in its privileges. It was a pioneer in this child-saving work, and still holds the leading place in it. Last summer its beneficiaries numbered 1,721, mostly children, while advice and assistance were freely extended to many more. The success of last year when 17 mothers and 125 children had a two weeks' outing in groups of 30 at "Bonnie Bains" leads the Managers of The Country Week to anticipate a pleasant and profitable vacation for as large a number this season as the funds will permit.

Prehistoric Ruins Found at Mesa Verde Park in Colorado

Where did the Indians come from? That is one of the innumerable questions which anthropologists have not yet solved. Some suggest that they came from Asia by way of Alaska because the Eskimo seem to somewhat resemble Mongolians. Others think they came from Europe by way of Greenland; others that they came from the South Sea Islands by way of South America.

Perhaps all these theorists are right. In one thing only do they agree and that is that, from Arctic to the Antarctic, no matter what their tribal or other differences due to varying conditions of climate and surroundings, all American Indians are of one physical type with similar mental characteristics and cultural tendencies.

Their highest civilization undoubtedly developed in Peru, Central America, and southern Mexico, where architectural ruins of quite astonishing beauty are to-day crumbling under the jungle. This civilization was ruthlessly destroyed by the Spanish conquest following the discovery of America.

The next highest prehistoric civilization was in our own southwest, and the remains of its highest special development are the cliff dwellings of the Mesa Verde in southwestern Colorado, to preserve which Congress has set apart the Mesa Verde National Park.

When one speaks of the Pueblo Indians he does not mean an Indian stock or tribe, but merely Indians, possibly of various stocks and many tribes, who used to live, and a few of whose modern descendants still live, in pueblos or community houses of many rooms holding entire tribes or villages under one roof. The builders of Mesa Verde's prehistoric dwellings were of the Pueblo type.

Those who have traveled through our southwestern states have seen from the car window innumerable mesas or small isolated plateaus rising abruptly, for hundreds of feet, from the bare and often arid plains. The word mesa is a Spanish for table, and indeed many of these mesas when seen at a distance may suggest to the imaginative mind tables with cloths reaching to the floor.

Once the level of these mesa tops was the level of all of this vast southwestern country, but the rains and floods of centuries have washed away all the softer earth down to its present level leaving standing only the rocky spots or those so covered with surface rocks that the rains could not reach the softer gravel underneath.

All have heard of the Enchanted Mesa in New Mexico which the Indians of recent times considered sacred. The Mesa Verde, or green mesa (because it is covered with stunted cedar and pinyon trees in a land where trees are few) is the next most widely known.

The Mesa Verde is one of the largest mesas. It is fifteen miles long and eight miles wide. At its foot are masses of broken rocks rising from 300 to 500 feet above the bare plains. These are called the talus. Above the talus yellow sandstone walls rise precipitously two or three hundred feet higher to the mesa's top.

It stands on the right bank of the Mancos River, down to which a number of small, rough canyons, once beds of streams, slope from the top of the mesa. It is in the sides of these small canyons where the most wonderful and best preserved cliff dwellings in America, if not in the world, are found today.

In prehistoric times a large human population lived in these cliff dwellings, seeking a home there for protection. They obtained their livelihood by agriculture on the forbidding tops of the mesa, cultivating scanty farms.

PURSE OF GOLD

Presented to Physical Director Macpherson of the Newton Y. M. C. A.

Physical Director William Macpherson of the Newton Y. M. C. A. was given a farewell reception and presented with a purse of gold last Monday evening at the Association Building on Church street. In spite of the fact that many persons are away, quite a number of business men and the senior class were present to greet Mr. Macpherson, congratulate him on his new position as Physical Director of the Brooklyn Navy Y. M. C. A. and to express their sincere regrets that he was to leave Newton. Secretary Harry W. Bascom opened the formal proceedings by reading some of the many letters which had been received and President Charles D. Kepner in a few well chosen words presented Mr. Macpherson with the gold. Mr. Macpherson, who has just returned from Frank A. Day Camp, the new camp of the Newton Y. M. C. A. at East Brookfield told of the experiences of the boys and himself during the past few weeks. Refreshments were served.

The committee in charge of the reception was: F. D. Fuller, C. L. Ellison, C. D. Kepner, George Q. Hill, John C. Brimblecom and H. W. Bascom, Secretary.

The Refreshment Committee consisted of R. S. Webster, Valentine Ferris and William H. Cady.

THE JUVENILE LAW

Parents of Delinquent Minors Should be Held Responsible

With the announcement that a police-woman is to be appointed in Brookline comes a story from Portland, Ore., that emphasizes the need of policemen, not only in Brookline, but in every big town and city in the United States. In the Western city a mother has just been convicted for "contributing to the delinquency" of her daughter, a wayward girl of fifteen. The mother tried to excuse herself by saying that she had prayed for the child. The deputy district attorney thinks that prayer is not sufficient.

"The Lord will provide," says he, "with co-operation, safety for children. The courts are aids to parents, not their proxies. Go back to the old-fashioned rule of holding the parents responsible for their children, as our Puritan ancestors did, and we'll cut juvenile delinquency 25 per cent. in one year."

Everything, in fact, that the deputy has to say is worth repeating. His name is C. W. Robinson. Juvenile delinquency, he says, is on the increase.

"Modern life in cities has created new dangers that beset the young. The juvenile court system is sound. The trouble lies in the use to which courts are put. A court at best can only aid the parent. A court can never be substituted for the parent."

"We send children to the reformatories, but allow the parents, through whose carelessness the child has become delinquent, to go unpunished. The old-fashioned mother saw that all her children were in bed—then she prayed for them."

When the child in question, Frances Hodges, was brought before the juvenile court, and the deputy district attorney announced his attention of proceeding against the mother, other lawyers laughed. No grand jury, they declared would ever indict the mother. But the mother was indicted. Then the lawyers declared that no jury would ever convict on the grounds

HOUSEKEEPING A BUSINESS

State Commissioner of Weights and Measures Makes Some Valuable Suggestions

Mr. Thure Hanson, the State Commissioner of Weights and Measures, has just prepared and published a pamphlet which should be of great value to every housekeeper.

The book is called "Measurements for the Household," and its purposes, Mr. Hanson says, "is to give information as to units, methods and instruments of measurement useful in household activities; to describe available means of assuring correct quantity in articles bought by weight and measure, and to give other facts of interest."

"Housekeeping," the commissioner declares, "is Massachusetts' principal industry." Continuing, he says, "If you are engaged in this industry you should:

"Trade with dealers who have accurate and sealed weighing and measuring devices.

"Check up all goods received, to ascertain if full quantity has been delivered."

"Purchase package goods which are legibly marked on the outside of package with the net quantity which it contains."

"See that your milk and cream bottles are filled to the cap or stopple."

"The coal dealer is required by law to deliver to you a sworn statement as to the weight delivered. See that you receive such a certificate."

"If any coal dealer neglects to give you a certificate stating the number of pounds contained in a load that is being delivered to you, the local sealer of weights and measures should be promptly notified."

"In purchasing ice be careful to ask for a certain weight of ice, viz. 50 pounds, 75 pounds, 100 pounds, and do not be content to accept 10-cent, 20-cent, 30-cent pieces."

"In purchasing meats request that all 'trimmings' be included with purchase; otherwise a correct check of goods cannot be made."

"In purchasing turkey, chicken, etc., do not accept the weight as sometimes already marked on the same, but insist that the commodity be reweighed in your presence.

"Equip your kitchen with a good scale of 10 to 20 pounds capacity, weighing in cunces, and have it tested and sealed annually by the local sealer of weights and measures. Use this scale for checking all weights of commodities delivered, and if under weight is found to exist, do not fail to bring each case to the attention of the dealer. The shortage may be due merely to carelessness, but you are entitled to full weight, and he should be made to realize that you are a business woman and will not countenance unbusinesslike methods in his dealings with you."

"Also have on hand an accurate peck measure, a dry quart, a liquid quart, a 60-inch steel tape, an eight-ounce graduate. These should also be submitted to the sealer for test."

"Be businesslike when purchasing. The merchant is careful that in his sales he receives full value for correct weight or measure given. He is obliged to be careful, else his business would be done at a loss. Why then should the business of housekeeping be done in a careless manner and at a loss. Order commodities in terms of weight and measure. Do not order a 'pail of lard,' 'print of butter,' '30-cents worth of potatoes,' 'piece of bacon,' 'can of oil,' 'box or basket of fruit,' unless you know how much that pail, print, package, contains in weight or measure."

"Refuse to accept a bill from your tradesman made in the following manner:

Butter35
Oil15
Lard10
"Insist that a bill be rendered in the following manner:
Beef, 1 pound, 6 ounces	$0.40
Butter, 1 pound35
Oil, 1 gallon15
Lard, 1 pound15

"Under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts you have definite rights in the matter of getting full measure and full weight of everything you buy, and the State Department of Weights and Measures and your local sealer stand ready to help you get your rights. This is a protection that is due the honest dealer as well as yourself."

"You are probably very careful in making your purchases to require good quality. Should you not be as careful as to quantity received for the amount expended?"

"The retailer checks up all goods received. If he sells intelligently, he sells most of his commodities by weight. The housekeeper should be as careful when purchasing."

"The State Department of Weights and Measures and your local sealer want your co-operation in the cause of honest weights and measures."

EDITORIAL

Facts and figures so far as they can be verified indicate that there will be a substantial increase in the tax rate for the present year over the $18.50 rate of 1915. The extraordinary increase in the city expenses is responsible for this condition, and part of it is due to the expense of over $50,000 in improving the fire hazard conditions of our school buildings. Everything depends, of course, on the work of the Assessors in finding new taxable property, but the additional expenses of the city will require at least two millions of new property to be found and then add about fifty cents to the rate.

The state tax is reduced about $30,000 but that sum is offset about $18,000 by the change in the disposition of the corporation taxes. There are gratifying decreases also in the metropolitan sewer and park assessments and only a slight increase in the county tax, the total decrease in the state, county and metropolitan assessments and taxes, omitting the loss on corporation taxes, being over $41,000. Against this, however, there is an increase of over $147,000 in the city tax, so that the net increase in the tax levy, including loss on corporation taxes is about $125,000. The aldermen will undoubtedly authorize a substantial amount to be taken out of the Excess and Deficiency account at the meeting to be held early next month, but there will still remain a large sum to be met by an increase in valuations and an increase in rate. Newton taxpayers ought not to be surprised if the 1916 rate is $19.00 or over.

The new ordinance requiring permission of the aldermen before a garage of any size or nature can be occupied is a trifle too broad in its nature. The control of the public and multiple form of garages is clearly necessary, but it seems needless to bother the owner of a garage for one or two cars to obtain an aldermanic permit to occupy, after completing with the Building laws and the conditions imposed by the Fire Prevention Commissioner. The ordinance is now requiring special meetings of the aldermen and will probably lead to a modification of its present provisions.

Attention is invited to the suggestion in our Free Library article this week to the necessity for branch libraries in this city. Our peculiar geographical situation demands a service of the Newton Library which is unusual and creates a condition which handicaps the efficiency of the library. The city government ought to adopt a plan of building one of these much needed branch library buildings in every two years, at least, and thus enable our scattered population to obtain a larger use of our well equipped and well stocked library.

Attention is directed to the article printed this week regarding Household Economics, based on a report by the State department of weights and measures. The pamphlet can be obtained without expense by writing the Commissioner of Weights and Measures at the State House, Boston.

With rival candidates for the Republican nominations in this district for district attorney, for state senator, for representatives and the possibility of a fight for Congressional honors, the state primary on Sept. 26 will be an interesting occasion.

The retirement of Mr. William Macpherson as Physical Director of the Newton Y. M. C. A. after eight years of efficient service is keenly felt by the many men and boys who have benefited by his instruction, inspired by his enthusiasm, and encouraged and cheered by his genial smile and personality. Mr. Macpherson takes with him to his larger field of work the affection of the many friends he has made in this city, as well as their best wishes for his future.

The action of the national administration in sending civilian troops to the Mexican front and then neglecting to pay for their services, so that the families left behind have to suffer or depend on charity, is almost criminal.

NEWTON FREE LIBRARY

The Newton Free Library has recently received $5000 in cash and securities from the executors of the will of Miss Mary Shannon, who died April 19, 1901, leaving a total of $126,000 to public institutions.

This bequest to the Newton Free Library makes the total of Trust Funds now held by the Library amount to about $26,000. Aside from these there is $600 received annually from the Read Fund, which is to be used for the purchase of books of a general nature. The Jewett Art Fund of $10,000 specifies that the income shall be used for the purchase of paintings, engravings, statuary and any other works of art, including books and magazines. The income of the Chaffin Fund is to be expended in the purchase of books of an instructive and elevating character, while the income derived from the Farlow Reference Fund is to be devoted to the purchase of books and works of art suited to the uses and purposes of the Reference Department. The income of the Alden Spear Fund is given for the promotion of manufactures and the mechanic arts. The receipts of interest of the Elizabeth L. Rand Fund are being accumulated in order to bring the principal of this to the $1000 as was intended by the will.

While this endowment seems a goodly sum, yet its income of some $1800 is small when compared with the $17,000 which the New Bedford and the Malden Library receives annually from its funds, or even the income of $8,000 with which the Haverhill Library is blessed. Special funds make it possible for the library recipient to indulge in lines other than the city appropriation would allow. The excellent reference collection at this library is due to the foresight of the late John S. Farlow, while for our incomparable collection of art material we, of today, must thank the wisdom of David B. Jewett. The recently received Mary Shannon Fund is given simply to the "Free Library," and the income may therefore be expended at the option of the Trustees. Probably the greatest need of the Newton Free Library at this time is the erection of branch libraries in the various sections of the city—for with adequate buildings only can the work of the library hope to grow. The Branch Libraries at Newton Centre, Newton Highlands, West Newton and Newtonville each have less than 2,000 volumes, while probably most towns of this population (about 6,000) in Massachusetts would have well-equipped libraries of upwards of 10,000 volumes. The library situation of Newton is a peculiar one, but Branch Library buildings in at least four sections of the city are a necessity if Newton is to hold in the future the prestige of the past. Buildings for this purpose may be erected for about $20,000 or more, and a community library would prove a useful as well as an ornamental memorial for present and future generations.

Many less costly things than buildings are needed as a part of the equipment, and in line with this, the library's Board of Trustees extends its thanks to the Newton Upper Falls Improvement Society for its initiative in installing a telephone at that Library, and to the Newton Highlands Congregational Church for its gift of some three hundred volumes from its Sunday School Library.

NORTH SHORE ROUTE

"On to Gloucester!" is a familiar sound at this time of year, and the famous fishing port is as attractive as ever. The sail down the harbor and along the north shore is delightful, and the trip is an easy and enjoyable one-day event. The steel steamers "Cape Ann" and "City of Gloucester" leave Central wharf, at the foot of State street, Boston, at 10 A. M. and 2 P. M.; Sundays and holidays at 10:15 A. M. Leave Gloucester week days at 2:15 P. M.; Sundays and holidays at 3:15 P. M. The Atlantic avenue elevated and tunnel stations are opposite Central wharf.

When Things Fade.

A powder comes for the purpose of restoring faded color to thin fabrics without dyeing them. It is sold in little pasteboard boxes in all the light colors—lavender, pink, blue, ecru and other pastel shades. After you have washed the faded fabric until it is clean, you sprinkle some of this powder in the rinsing water and rinse the fabric until it has absorbed enough of the color. Of course, the powder has to be used each time the fabric is washed. But it is much easier and more satisfactory than a dye, that must be boiled in, for some things. Crepe de chine underwear, for instance, or negligee of a fragile sort, or flimsy blouses can be wonderfully freshened and brightened with this coloring powder.

A Fellow Feeling.

"All sorts and conditions of men have excellent explanations for their position in life," said the senator. "A tramp, however, came under my observation who had no illusions about the cause of his own condition. A fine-looking and fashionably dressed woman had just alighted from her limousine at the hotel entrance and was suddenly approached by this shabbily dressed man, who requested a dime. 'No, I have no money to spare for you,' she said. 'I do not see why an able-bodied man like you should go about begging.' 'I s'pose, ma'am,' replied the lazy tramp, 'it's fer about the same reason that a healthy woman like you boards at a hotel instead of keepin' house.'"—Harper's Magazine.

Yellow Jackets Skunk's Food.

The common skunk is fond of yellow jackets. It catches these insects by smearing its tail with a sticky saliva, which makes the bushy tail serve as fly paper.

Right or Wrong Number?

The right way to call a telephone number is to consult the telephone directory, get the correct number, and then call for that number, clearly and distinctly, when the operator answers your signal. If you do not ask for the correct number you will be connected with the wrong number.

Have you ever noticed how the mind plays queer pranks with numbers in transposing figures? It will readily transpose 1468 into 1648, or 6426 into 6246.

If memory only is relied upon, there is always a likelihood of error, and valuable time is lost in correcting such errors.

If an old memorandum containing a number is used, there may have been a change since it was written or printed, therefore the telephone directory should be consulted whenever you wish to talk.

There can be no time saved by guessing—"nears" don't count; every wrong number call is an economic waste to the subscriber as well as to the company.

The wrong way creates annoyance to the person who is called by mistake; the right way saves delay and annoyance in completing your message, and it creates a high grade of service for you and for others.

If you cannot find the name in the telephone directory, ask for the "Information Operator" at the desired Central office. Her records are complete and up to the minute; she knows every new subscriber's number, every change of location as well as of number, and will start you right with the desired information.

SALADS IN SUMMER

APPETIZING DISHES FOR THE HOT WEATHER.

Apples, Celery, and Walnuts Mixed Well Together Make One of the Best—Watercress is Excellent—With Oranges and Grapes.

Apple, Celery and Walnut Salad.—Cut into cubes two apples, pared, and one apple with the red skin left on, a few stalks of celery and a cupful of walnut meats. Stir in a bowl with some salad dressing. Pile a spoonful of this on a lettuce leaf, with a dot of the dressing on top. Use the rest of the lettuce head for lettuce sandwiches at supper time.

Watercress Salad.—Make an ordinary potato salad, chopped potatoes, with a little raw onion. Arrange in oval mound on platter. Divide into quarters with knives, leaving the knives in the salad. Cover two opposite corners with chopped beets. Of the remaining two corners cover one with sifted yolk of hard-boiled egg and the other with the white, chopped. Marinate with French dressing and set away to chill. Just before serving remove knives and in the cross left put sprays of parsley. Also surround salad with parsley. This salad is very attractive.

Pecan and Potato Salad.—Mix two cupfuls of diced cooked potatoes with one cupful of broken pecan meats, sprinkle with salt, marinate with French dressing, turn into a salad bowl rubbed lightly with garlic, surround with watercress and garnish with halves of pecan nut meats.

Veal and Cabbage Salad.—Mix two cupfuls of cold cooked veal cut into dice with one cupful of finely chopped cabbage, moisten with salad dressing and serve in nests of lettuce leaves.

Orange and Grape Salad.—Pare two seedless oranges, cutting deep enough to remove all the white, and cut the pulp into small pieces. Add an equal quantity of malaga grapes from which the seeds have been removed and one tablespoonful of canned pimento cut into tiny strips; moisten with French dressing and serve in nests of lettuce leaves.

Turnip and Onion Salad.—Peel one large white and one yellow turnip, boil in salted water until tender, drain, cool and cut into dice. Peel and cut a medium-sized Bermuda onion in thin slices. Arrange the turnips and onions in alternate layers in the form of a pyramid, surround with slices of hard-boiled eggs and pickled beets cut in fancy shapes and serve with French or boiled dressing.

Fried Frogs' Legs.—Place two dozen frogs' legs in an earthen dish containing a marmalade composed of two tablespoonfuls of olive oil, the juice of a small lemon, one small onion sliced, a branch of parsley, two bay leaves, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika. Drain, sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper, dip in milk and roll in flour. Fry in smoking hot oil until colored a light brown. Garnish with parsley and serve with lemon sauce.

Lemon Sauce.—Put the juice of a large lemon in a double boiler with one-half cupful of butter, a dash each of salt and pepper and beat until it becomes thick and hot, but do not allow it to boil. Stir in the beaten yolks of two eggs and remove from the fire. Serve hot.

Baked Stuffed Onions.—Pare the onions and boil until tender, changing the water four times during the cooking. Scoop out the centers and chop them finely. Mix together equal parts of chopped ham and soft bread crumbs, add the chopped onions, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter and season with pepper and a little salt. Fill the onions with the mixture, arrange them in a baking pan, baste with water and melted butter and bake until brown.

Hash With Eggs.—This is delicious: One cupful of boiled ham, chopped fine; one cupful of potato, mashed or chopped; one cupful of cracker or bread crumbs; season well, mix all together with water put in a deep plate, smooth it over and then make little dents in the top large enough to hold an egg. Put it in the oven and heat it through, then remove and drop an egg in each of the places and return it to the oven till the eggs are cooked.

Beef Cutlets.—Put the beef through the chopper (as for hamburger steak), season with sage and pepper, moisten with cream, then mold in cutlet form and boil. Serve with a brown sauce made by browning a slice of onion in two tablespoonfuls of butter, adding a little salt, pepper and two tablespoonfuls of stock. Boil until smooth, then add a hard-boiled egg, chopped in small pieces.

West Indian Salad.—Take two medium-sized cucumbers, remove any seeds, four or five young onions, the outside of one large green pepper (no seeds) and put all in chopping bowl. Chop (not too finely), season with salt, pepper and vinegar. Serve icy cold with fish or cold meat.

Deviled Sardines.—Remove the skins from the sardines, place on a buttered plate, season with Worcestershire sauce, mustard and cayenne. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake till brown. Serve very hot.

TAKING CARE OF FURNITURE

Simple Methods Constantly Employed Will Keep It Looking Its Best for Many Years.

White furniture and wood work can be beautifully cleaned with whitening; wring a flannel cloth from hot water, dip in whitening and rub well to remove all stains, then wash off the whitening with clean, warm water, dry with a soft cloth; the rubbing strokes should always be with the grain of the wood.

Wicker furniture should be cleaned with a strong solution of salt and water. Soap should never be used on wicker, as it produces a yellow tinge; where very shabby-looking, wicker may be refreshed by being painted. The paint used should be well mixed and thinned to the proper consistency. If too thick it is apt to remain on the wicker in lumps.

Furniture upholstered in leather cloth will last much longer if the covering is occasionally revived with the following mixture: Take one part best vinegar, two parts of boiled linseed oil, shake well together. Apply a little on a soft rag and afterward polish with a silk duster or an old chamois leather.

When cleaning upholstered furniture it is often either impossible or inconvenient to move it out of doors. In such cases place a wet cloth over the piece of furniture and then beat it, changing the cloth several times during the process. The dust will adhere to the cloth and will not rise in the room.

Try rubbing your furniture which has grown streaked and dull with a flannel dipped in equal parts of turpentine and kerosene oil. It polishes quickly and much more cleanly than the expensive polishes.

EFFICIENCY IN THE KITCHEN

Standardizing of Equipment Will Be Found to Work Wonders in Lessening the Labor.

The thinking housewife who puts her housework on a systematic basis is bound to standardize conditions, thereby accomplishing more and better work with the least expenditure of time, energy and money. Standardizing means working at the right height with the proper tools under the best conditions of light, ventilation and comfort.

How many women stoop unnecessarily over kitchen tables, sinks, wash tubs and ironing boards? We waste time and needless walking in poorly arranged kitchens, whereas, if our main working equipment was placed in right relation to our smaller equipment, much waste motion would be done away with.

Think over carefully the efficiency of your kitchen and try by rearranging the equipment you have, to do more work and better work in less time.—Miriam M. Haynes, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.

Stuffed Tomatoes.

Twelve large, smooth tomatoes, one teaspoonful of salt, a little pepper, one tablespoonful of butter, one of sugar, one cupful of bread crumbs, one teaspoonful of onion juice. Arrange the tomatoes in a baking pan. Cut a thin slice from the smooth end of each. With a small spoon scoop out as much of the pulp and juice as possible without injuring the shape. Mix all have been treated in this way, mix the pulp and juice with the other ingredients and fill the tomatoes with this mixture. Put on the tops, and bake slowly three-quarters of an hour. Slide the cake turner under the tomatoes and lift gently on to a flat dish. Garnish with parsley and serve.

Ham and Sweet Peppers.

Canned or sweet peppers are very nice to combine with minced ham. Put the ham through a meat grinder, also some sweet peppers. To three cupfuls of meat use half a cupful of peppers. In a deep bowl mix the ham, peppers and one tablespoonful of minced parsley. Put into a deep baking dish, sprinkle the top with bread crumbs and bits of butter, and bake in a quick oven half an hour.

Stuffed Green Peppers.

Cut stem end off, scoop out seeds, put cups thus cleaned into cold water, and when they have boiled 15 minutes take off the stove and drain. Mix stuffing as follows: Equal parts of pressed ham and bread and small onion run through meat chopper. Stuff peppers with this mixture, put a piece of butter on top of each and bake 15 minutes in pretty hot oven.

Hot Water Without a Fire.

It is disagreeable to keep a fire during the warm summer months merely for hot water. Have the tinier make a jacket out of galvanized iron, give it a lining of asbestos and place it around the hot water tank. The iron is of such width that two pieces will cover the entire tank and extend far enough above to hold a layer of ashes. The water will stay hot 24 hours.

Cream of Celery Soup.

Wash and scrape one head celery, simmer in one pint of water until soft mash in same water. Cook one tablespoonful of onion in one pint of milk ten minutes, add to celery, strain and put on to boil. Cook one tablespoonful of flour in one tablespoonful of butter until smooth. Stir into soup, add salt, pepper and strain.

For the Pastry Cook.

To prevent pie crust from soaking, glaze the under side with beaten whites of eggs.

Why Put Off Painting?

You buy new shoes when the old ones fail to protect your feet or when they look shabby. Why do you put off painting when the weather eats into your house or your house has that run-down-at-the-heel look? It's good judgment to paint now with and pure linseed oil. Such paint is an armor-like protection against decay—tough, elastic, non-cracking, lasting.

POLICE COURT

William Vahey of Mechanic street, Newton Upper Falls, was in court Wednesday charged with disturbance on an electric car and also with drunkenness. He was fined $10 for disturbance and $5 was added on the charge of being drunk.

Judge Frank M. Copeland has been on the bench this week in place of Judge Kennedy.

Monday was non support day in the local police court and three men who failed to comply with the orders of the court were brought before Judge Copeland. Antonio Nisszyporwicz was some time ago ordered to pay his wife $3 per week. Saturday, it is alleged, the prisoner induced his wife to draw $100 from the bank to go to Boston to buy some furniture and renew housekeeping. In Boston they went into a place to procure refreshments. The man told his wife he had no money to pay the bill. The wife produced her pocketbook and the prisoner, it is said, grabbed it and ran out of the place. The wife returned to Newton, told her story to Chief Mitchell, and officers soon arrested the husband. He was given three months at Cambridge. John Murray, who neglected to pay his wife $3 per week, was sent to the House of Correction and his wife will receive 50 cents per day while he is there. The case of Frank Harrington was continued until Oct. 8 and he was ordered to pay $8 per week.

AN ILLOGICAL CONDITION

Just at present many eloquent appeals are being sent out in large cities in behalf of not only of unemployed women, but women working at small salaries as clerks in department stores or as operators in the various manufacturing plants. These appeals dwell mournfully upon the fact that it is practically impossible for young women to secure comfortable quarters and suitable food and clothing with the wages they receive from their employers.

There is little doubt that the number of young women available for such positions is far in excess of the demand. Such being the case, employers are able to secure their help on practically their own terms.

If there was no other alternative for these employees their case would be more pitiable than it is. But, coincidentally with the excess of female help in commercial lines, there is an even greater lack of domestic help available in families.

If it were possible to induce a reasonable number of these young women to engage as maids and housekeepers, the problem would be solved in short order. Just why a woman will work for starvation wages in a store or factory and submit to the browbeating and indifference naturally associated with a position of uncertain tenure, when she can be that most independent object on earth, a competent housemaid, and secure almost if not quite as much in the way of wages plus board and lodging as she can secure elsewhere without board and lodging, is one of the mysteries of modern life.

It is said that there are families where domestic help is not treated with consideration, but as there are probably five other positions instantly available to any domestically efficient woman, that state of affairs should not necessarily need to figure very long.—Monthly Cyclopaedia.

SHOULD PARENTS BE PUNISHED BY LAW IF CHILD IS DELINQUENT?

offered. But the mother was convicted. Her lawyer fought hard for her; she had not known where her daughter was, or what she was doing. She had prayed for her every night.

Deputy Robinson replied, in substance, that the mother should have known where her daughter was, and what she was doing; and that prayer without care was as futile as faith without works. Local records quoted in connection with the case show that 76 per cent. of the juvenile delinquency in Multonah County is traceable to lax home discipline.

What is the appointment of a policeman but the acknowledgment that a similar condition prevails here? Brookline is not the only Eastern community that has a policeman; and many cities and towns are agitating for such an official.

What are the duties of a policeman? Not to make arrests; not to perform the same functions that the male officers perform. She will patrol the streets, especially the recreation parks, motion-picture houses, and dance halls, and befriend young girls who are unprotected, and worse than alone, because so often in dangerous company.

Whose duty is this? Not that of a parent—as nearly as one person the girls themselves. The appointment of a public official to do the duty of those parents—as near as one person can fulfill the duty of hundreds—shows to what a pass home discipline has come in American life.

Not that we deprecate the appointment; it is most necessary. What we deprecate is the need for such a makeshift.

According to the Western deputy, the remedy lies with the parents. That is true, but the case cannot be so simply disposed of. The mother of the Hodges child, as others in like case, will not be able suddenly to assume an authority that she has for years allowed to lapse; it is doubtful whether she can ever resume it. The mischief that Deputy Robinson lays at the door of modern living conditions is not the only mischief wrought by them. Laxity of discipline, and a weakening of home ties, is far more common than even juvenile delinquency. Many children, in families where the utmost care is exercised, are defiant of authority. They do not go wrong, because they have the opportunities for legitimate recreation that the Western girl lacked; because they have been "well brought up" and have fastidious tastes not satisfied by the vicious life of the streets; for a hundred reasons, perhaps, but not one of those reasons, because the parents have any proper authority.

We are hearing a good deal these days about modern methods of child training. Corporal punishment is under the ban; children must not be spanked, because they are more easily led by persuasion than by force. One is sometimes tempted to cry "Rubbish!" and to believe that the stern old-fashioned parent who brought up her children with a rod of iron was the most successful parent, after all.

And not only the most successful, but the best loved; for children love best that which they respect, and they have sharp perceptions. They know how far they can go, and how much power they have to defy regulations. All the new talk about child psychology finds its way into their young brains, and they know exactly how to take advantage of theories. Moral suasion—they know just how far to yield to it, and just how to take advantage of the situation, when parents are complacently feeling that headway is being made.

Clever little rascals—any one who denies them this tribute must have forgotten his own childhood.

A belief has crystallized about the new theories to the effect that children love best the parents who indulge them. How many parents do we hear say—

"When he grows up I want him to remember that he always had what he wanted."

Let those parents but bear in mind the great army of fallen and delinquent children who have exclaimed bitterly in after years those very words, "They let me have everything I wanted."

The cruelest part of the criminal indulgence of American parents is that children themselves cry out against it when they have grown to recognize its folly.

The Oregon mother is liable to a jail sentence. Worse than that sentence will be the reproaches of her own daughter in later years.—Katherine Brooks, in Boston Record.

POLICE NOTES

William E. Myott of Cambridge, who broke into one building in Newton Centre three times, was given a sentence of one month in the House of Correction in the Newton Court Tuesday by Judge Copeland. He was arrested Monday in the West End by Inspector McCauley, who found him trying to sell a pawn ticket for carpenter's tools. The articles named on the ticket corresponded with lists sent out by the Newton police, and questioning brought admissions from Myott, who went to an unfinished house on Beacon street, Newton Centre, on Friday night and took a box of tools. On Saturday night he broke into the place and took another box. He hid that box, returned and took a third. The

SHOWING HOW LIFE IS SAVED

Arrangements for Exhibit to Be Sent Through the Country on Special Train.

What the federal government is doing in the saving of life and property recently was shown in Washington and is now to be demonstrated to the country at large.

Secretary of the Interior Lane conceived the idea that the exposition recently held in Washington should be shown to the rest of the country, the Post of that city states. A special train is to be equipped as quickly as possible and sent throughout the country so that the people may have a more intimate idea of what their government is doing.

Here in Washington the exposition attracted more than 35,000 persons during one week. The work of the public health service in guarding the gateways of the republic against epidemics of diseases sent from foreign shores and the stamping out of these diseases on the threshold of the country was demonstrated at the exposition. Through this traveling exposition the people will get some idea of the work of the coast guard service in saving life at sea, the forest service plan of fighting forest fires and preserving millions of dollars of natural resources to the nation, the methods used by the bureau of mines in rescuing entombed miners from terrible death and the safety methods of the interstate commerce commission, which have signally reduced the deaths among trainmen.

The exposition also demonstrates the safety work of the army and navy departments in sanitation and the stamping out of typhoid fever and other diseases in the army and navy. A rare opportunity is being presented for the people who know more about the humane activities of their own government. The trip should stimulate patriotism and national pride.

IN BLUE AND ORANGE COLOR

Scientist Remarks on Strangeness of Aura of Human Beings Placed in Darkened Room.

"So far as we know," says the Medical Record, "the great scientists who have investigated the phenomena of spiritualism and have in some cases become converts to the latter belief, have not expressed themselves as cathedra on the validity of the finds in question. Recently Professor Benedikt of Vienna has made studies along these lines.

"At a meeting of the Royal and Imperial Society of Physicians of Vienna he stated without comment that when a normal human being is placed in a dark room the face appears blue, the left half of the body blue, and the right half red or orange. A woman who claimed to be able to locate objects with a divining rod seemed broader in the chamber than was actually the case. In particular the thumbs seemed much larger. "Another of these women gave off an emanation for part of the time only. Both the women were said to be able to locate water, coal, oil, and metals, the second one only when these were below the ground, while the first was able to find them when concealed in a room."

Professor Benedikt offered no explanations and advanced no theories.

To Manufacture Optical Glass.

The manufacture of American optical glass is about to be begun on a commercial basis, a large factory having been erected by an optical firm of Rochester, N. Y., which, it is said, will be equipped to make all kinds of lenses, from the tiny glass used in the microscope to that of the searchlight measuring several feet in diameter. The first effort in this direction was made about twenty-five years ago, and it was a failure. The latest effort in the manufacture of this glass was begun experimentally by the Rochester firm a few years ago, and when the war broke out they had just demonstrated its success, so that its expansion would have come along in the regular order of things. The necessity for a plant of this kind in this country has been forcibly demonstrated by the war, which has completely cut off the supply of optical glass, which came heretofore from one or the other of the belligerent countries.

Princeton's New Dining Halls.

The new dining halls which are being constructed at Princeton will have a grill and clubrooms along the lines of a university club. Large smoking rooms equipped with billiard tables will be provided for the freshman and sophomore classes, while there will be a reading room for all classes. Plans for the use of the grillroom are not completed, but it is likely that its main use will be for the entertainment of visitors. It is thought that a unionized dining hall, where the great majority of the student body, especially the lower classes, gravitate three times a day, may prove an excellent substitute for a common clubhouse where a student's social instinct may call him only at odd intervals.

Business.

"I took out an insurance policy on my house last week, and today the agent who insured me tried to sell me an extinguisher that will positively put out any kind of a fire."

"Well, what of it?"

"What I want to know is, why didn't he tell me about the extinguisher first. Then I could have saved the premium on my policy."

"Do not accuse any merchant of giving short weight unless you are absolutely sure. It may be that your scales are wrong, and you would be doing a great injustice to the merchant. When in doubt always have your goods reweighed by the sealer."

The book might be called "A Sermon on Thrift," for it admonishes its readers as follows: "Save your old paper and rags! By so doing, according to the United States Department of Commerce, you not only will be enriching yourself to a certain extent, but will be aiding paper manufacturers to solve what promises to become a very serious problem—the shortage of raw materials."

"The reason for saving and selling waste paper is not solely that of getting money for it from the junkman; it is to provide raw material that will keep paper factories going, and that will consequently provide paper for newspapers and books, and for wrapping bundles and packing goods."

Just what the old-fashioned housewife will have to say when she reads that popular culinary terms like "pinch of salt," "speck of pepper," "handful of rice" and "sweeten to taste" are, in the commissioner's opinion, "units of vague magnitude," remains to be seen. But the commissioner of weights and measures is a stickler for accuracy and in urging the use of household measuring appliances he emphasizes their value. Several pages with illustrations, are devoted to scales, thermometers and graduated.

Regarding the control of the heating and cooking apparatus the book states that:

"To increase the amount of heat, open drafts which let air into the ash pit, and with soft coal and wood when fresh fuel has been added admit some air by draft immediately over the fire to help burn the combustible gases coming from the fresh fuel. For all fires burning without flame keep this draft closed."

"To decrease the amount of heat close all drafts tight (being sure that ash-pit door, and drafts particularly are tight, and that the ash pit itself is free from air leaks), and if this is not sufficient open a check draft in the smoke pipe (never the one in the fire door or the door itself, as this practice is extremely wasteful of fuel).

"To insure economy of fuel see that all flues and surfaces which the hot gases pass on their way to the chimney are cleaned every two or three weeks."

"Be very careful in the use of the damper which closes off the smoke pipe, as such a damper is dangerous if closed too tightly and can be left wide open or taken out entirely provided the ash pit is tight and the above directions are followed."

"Keep the direct draft in a cooking stove or range closed except in hot weather, or when starting a fire."

If there is anything about coal that is omitted from the book it really can't be worth knowing. The book tells how to conserve the supply of ice, and discusses the sources and cost of light; how to read a water meter, a gas meter and an electric light meter.

The book gives considerable attention to clocks and points out the way to make clocks serve many more useful purposes than they ordinarily do.

The book supplies reference tables of weights and measures as applied to measurements not only of food, fuel and light but of dry goods, clothes line and most everything that goes with housekeeping.

THREE CANDIDATES

Three candidates are now in the field for the Republican nomination from this senatorial district as a successor to Senator George H. Ellis of this city. Representative James E. MacPherson and Dr. Enos H. Bigelow of Framingham and former representative William J. Naphen of Natick. Dr. Bigelow and Mr. Naphen were members of the House for several terms about three years ago and Mr. MacPherson is a member of the present House. Mr. MacPherson was first in the field and has at present a good lead over both of his opponents, although Dr. Bigelow and Mr. Naphen have many warm friends and will put up a good fight. The vote of this city at the primary will be a large factor in determining the party candidate for this office.

Hints on Longevity.

The other day an eighty-year-old man said that since he stopped taking baths, which was some years back, his health had been better. Another Santa Claus of the same age attributed his wonderful physical condition to Turkish baths. "I eat everything from mince pie to fried salt pork," he said. "I've drunk rum and whiskey when I felt like it. I've smoked and chewed tobacco. And I want to tell you that there's nothing better for the nerves and general health than chewing tobacco. I'm as sound as a dollar and as spry as a kitten." Isn't this enough to harrow up the soul and freeze the blood of a modern expert on "right living?"

—The United States Public Health Service asks do you think dog muzzling cruel and then marvel at the spread of rabies? Carefully select your brand of liquor and then feed your children unpasteurized milk? Repeat the Golden Rule and then sneeze in somebody's face? Go camping for your health and then place your toilet so that it drains into your water supply?

LETTER FROM THE FRONT

July 16, 1916.
Camp Cotton,
El Paso, Texas,
2nd Brigade, 9th, 8th, 5th Regts.
Today is very hot, 115 degrees, and with four hours of drill in the morning, the boys by noon are ready to take a shower and get ready for mess. The different companies are rapidly getting into condition, the two questions heard most are:
1. When are we going to get paid?
2. How long are we here for?

Regardless of what the newspapers have printed, only a very few companies in the whole Brigade have received any State pay and none from the government.

This is true of Company C of the 5th from Newton. A large percentage of the Company left Framingham with little money in their pockets, expecting to be paid on arrival here, yet two whole weeks have passed and they are still waiting.

The Newton Company left camp on the 12th with orders to proceed to Cantillo, a distance of 13 miles for guard duty. They are to remain 15 days when they will be relieved and return here to camp.

Sgt. Barrows came in today on a truck and reported all the men were well, but no excitement. The recruits arrived on Saturday and will remain here in Camp joining their organization on its return.

The boys are doing their work, but they feel that the State should not hold back their money, depriving them and in some cases their families of support.

CITY HALL

Street Commissioner Stuart is allowing the Buffalo Steam Roller Company of Buffalo, New York, to give a demonstration of a steam truck, capable of hauling with its trailer fifteen tons of crushed stone from one side of the city to the other and it has given very good satisfaction, it being the first one of its kind ever built in this country. The plans, specifications and mechanical drawings were made by a mechanical engineer of the Osler, Porter Company of London, England.

Mr. L. F. Bryant of Melrose is the New England Manager of the Buffalo Steam Roller Company and is carefully looking after the interests of the new machine, which has already proved to be a valuable asset to cities and towns and to contractors who are building roads in our state.

City Clerk F. M. Grant is enjoying his vacation at Chebeague Island, Me.

A special meeting of the aldermen was held at the unusual hour of nine o'clock, Wednesday morning. President Blanchard, and Aldermen Forkall, Murphy, Price, Cole, McCarthy, Early, Winslow, Hollis, Cobb, Clark, Clement, Harriman and Kendrick being present. Garage permits were granted to Rufus Estabrook, Woodland road, H. E. Cushman, Putnam street, and Clinton M. Pope, Bowdoin street. The Edison Co. was granted a relocation of poles on Woodward street and a loan of $6000 authorized for work on drainage of South Meadow swamp.

REFERRED TO STATE BOARD

At a meeting of the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway employees, held at Waltham, Friday night, the company's offer of an increase of one cent an hour each year for three years was unanimously rejected.

According to an existing agreement between the company and the employees, the question of the compensation of the employees, an increase in which has been demanded by them, must now be submitted to the State board of arbitration and conciliation.

J. H. Reardon, a member of the executive committee of the National Car-men's Association addressed the men. The employees demanded an increase of 6 cents the first year, 8 cents the second year and 10 cents the third year, bringing, in three years, the wages to 38 cents per hour. They receive at present 24 cents an hour.

—Silence Pleases Orator.
What a speaker likes best is not applause. It is silence. There are moments when to a speaker the silence can be thrilling. Then he knows, as we say, that he "has" his audience. A perfect relation has been established. During those moments the thought is passing rapidly from the speaker's mind into the minds of the listeners, and is taking effect. It may not always be a sympathetic effect. It may even be hostile. Nevertheless, the thought is at work.

DO YOU WANT A FREE AUTO?

The plan of providing all views in postcard form in connection with the great Neighborhood Auto Contest at Norumbega has met with favor among the many patrons who are competing. In this manner anyone who has failed to enter the contest can do so now without loss of time and, in addition, any contestant who wishes to give the pictures more careful study than the views on the screen afford, can take the postcards home and study them at leisure.

The value of the prizes, and the liberal terms of the contest, make it one of the most generous offers ever put before the public. Any patron more than ten years of age is eligible to compete and, aside from the excellent awards, the contest, in itself, is fascinating.

Three pictures are shown each night, the set of three being changed twice a week.

Get Busy Now and win an auto, a free trip or a substantial award of cash.

MUST WATCH FOOD

HOUSEKEEPER'S RESPONSIBILITY IN THE HOT WEATHER.

Almost Every Variety Will Quickly Spoil Unless Especial Care Is Taken—Points of Importance Worth Remembering.

An additional responsibility is brought to the housekeeper in the hot season, writes Mrs. Christine Frederick in the Chicago News. She must pay greater attention to her food supplies and the way they are kept. It is in periods of high temperature that all foods, and particularly meat, milk and fruits, are likely to spoil and decay.

The laboratory is not so far distant from the kitchen and, indeed, the best housekeepers are those who make a laboratory out of their kitchen and follow in it the principles that science has proved. It is undisputed that there are minute organisms or bacteria in the air which feed on our foods. There are also in the foods themselves certain substances which, while not alive, are the products of living things and which cause fruits to ripen, seeds to grow, etc.

Both these causes result in deterioration or decay of the food unless they are prevented. Bacteria of various kinds and allied plant organisms like mold attack and break down food tissue, causing the food to become unfit for use. Now, there are about three ways in which the housewife can prevent food from deteriorating:

1. By keeping the food in a low temperature, as with the icebox, etc.
2. By sterilizing and killing the bacteria by means of a high temperature.
3. By the use of certain preservatives, as sugar, salt, vinegar, spices, etc.

The first means entails constant supervision of the refrigerator. Newspapers should not be used on the shelves or on the ice, as this prevents proper circulation of air and may cause the box to become bad smelling and damp, the very conditions under which bacteria flourish most. It should be kept clean and foods properly placed in it. Overripe fruit, hot or even warm foods, strong smelling foods, like onions and bananas, should never be placed in the box. Small quantities of leftovers should be covered with glass or agate saucers and only glass, china or agate should be used in which to lay away food.

The second point can be followed by cooking a quantity of food which seems to be on the point of spoiling. A box of berries can be saved by stewing with sugar. Milk which undoubtedly would not keep until the next morning would be satisfactory if scalded. Many other foods which might become subject to mold or spoilage can be saved by being thus cooked or sterilized and perhaps canned temporarily.

Salt, sugar and vinegar are helpful, natural preservatives. Their addition to many fruits and vegetables will make them "keep" several days longer than if they were not used. For instance, beets, string beans, cucumber, etc., which in warm weather cannot be allowed to stand over night unless in a very low temperature, will be perfectly preserved if covered with a weak solution of vinegar or brine. Soups and all twice cooked foods like stews, etc., are particularly likely to ferment and should be watched carefully. All containers of food must be allowed sufficient air and not closed when the foods are still warm.

New Tea.

A beverage that is indorsed by science as being perfectly harmless is known as mate. Unlike ordinary tea, mate is improved by boiling, and the same handful of herbs, or prepared mate leaves, can be used for two infusions and the second may be better than the first. It is a tonic, a stimulant and a diuretic. It is especially desirable for those who wish to counteract the consequences of physical or mental work.

Fruit Conserve.

Two quarts of cherries pitted, two quarts of gooseberries, one quart of red raspberries, one pound of seeded raisins, three oranges cut in pieces, leaving rind on; one lemon, juice only, three-quarters of a pound of fruit. Boil half an hour or more and put in tumblers. Prepare the fruit and sugar over night. By morning the sugar is dissolved.

Nutmeg Cookies.

Mix two cupfuls of sugar, three-fourths of a cupful of butter, two thirds of a cupful of sour milk, nutmeg enough to flavor, two eggs, a teaspoonful of soda and enough flour to roll. Roll out thin and bake in a quick oven.

Mussel or Clam Salad.

Wash, boil five minutes, remove heads and black membranes, dip in melted butter, salt, pepper and lemon juice mixed, set in ice box one hour; serve with lettuce, French dressing and minced parsley, cress or cucumber.

Dyeing Rags for Rugs.

When dyeing rags for home-made rugs, tie the bunches of rags tightly round before dipping in the dye. This will give intervals of rags without color, and the effect when woven will be greatly admired.

To Keep Meringue From Falling.

To keep meringue from falling, add to it a spoonful of baking powder just before putting the meringue on the pie.

DRINKS FOR SUMMER DAYS

Delicious Cooling Beverages That Are at the Command of Practically Every Housewife.

Grape juice is an excellent foundation for a variety of delicious drinks, and has the advantage of being healthful. It is much more economical to put up your own grape juice each year, but if you have not done this a case of small bottles does not come high.

Grape juice and limes make one of the most deliciously cooling of summer drinks. Pour into a tall glass three or four fingers of grape juice, add the juice of two limes and a slice of the peel; fill the glass with water to taste—a sparkling water is preferable—and serve ice cold.

Grape juice and lemonade make a good combination.

A ginger ale and cold tea punch is a novel drink that is very good. Sweeten half a pitcher of cold tea, add the juice of a lemon and several sprigs of mint. Keep on ice and at the last minute pour in a bottle of ginger ale. This should not stand before serving, as the ginger ale will lose its sparkle. A rather strong and not too sweet ginger ale should be used for this punch.

Iced cafe au lait is the best drink to serve if the luncheon is very light, and a little extra nourishment is wanted. To make it properly—and it seldom is made properly—it should be carefully blended, mixing the coffee and milk well together and sweetening to taste. It is better, if possible, to use a sugar sirup to sweeten it. Stand on the ice until ready to serve and then add a little thick cream to each glass and enough cracked ice to fill the glass. For the sweeter varieties of soft drinks, milk shakes and fruit sirups may be used.

To make a milk shake fill a glass two-thirds full of milk; sweeten it to taste with any fruit sirup or with a little of some strained preserve, if you have not the sirup. Fill the glass with cracked ice and shake together until well mixed.

Fruit sirups can be made from strawberries, raspberries, cherries or currants. Cook a quart of fruit with a pint of water until well softened, then strain and press out the juice through a heavy cloth. When cold, sweeten and dilute to taste, and serve in tall glasses filled with cracked ice.

TEMPTING DISHES

Chop boiled spinach fine and mix thoroughly with a raw egg. Mold and put in the oven a minute to reheat.

A spoonful of boiled and grated fresh corn or one of the canned corn if heated and put in the bottom of the soup plate just before the tomato soup is poured in, makes a dish decidedly new and appetizing.

The top of the round is often cut up in inch cubes, browned slightly and then stewed in enough water to cover it. This is put in the middle of the platter and then surrounded with boiled noodles to make a tasty dish.

For anyone who likes cooked bananas a very good idea is to cut the fruit very, very fine and then add to the hot cake batter and cook the same as the ordinary hot cakes. Grated corn is also very good if used in the same manner.

Brown Stew.

Two pounds and a half of neck and shoulder of fresh beef cut in small pieces. If too fat, remove some of it, wash meat and put on stove in about two quarts or more of hot water in a good-sized kettle. Add two onions sliced thin, two good-sized carrots cut in dice, three medium potatoes cut up. Stew should cook about three and a half hours. Don't boil too hard. Should be quite thick and very dark rich brown in color and not fat. Put in onions, carrots, salt and pepper when you put on the meat; put in potatoes about one-half hour before stew is done.

Calves' Liver and Bacon.

Cook rare eight slices of bacon in the blaze; lift the bacon out, leaving the fat in the pan; put in eight slices of liver cut thin and lightly dusted with flour, and cook for five minutes, turning continually; now put the bacon back to finish, adding a tablespoonful of butter and salt and pepper to taste. Then serve.

Tomatoes and Cheese.

Prepare slices of hot toast. Take one cupful of tomato juice. Grate one pound of cheese to the tomato with salt, a little cayenne pepper and one cupful bread crumbs. Melt tablespoonful butter in omelet pan, add above mixture and stir until cooked and creamy. Pour over toast and serve.

To Clean Window Shades.

Wet a sponge with lukewarm water, squeeze out the surplus, and go over the shade carefully. It may be necessary to do this twice, then wipe gently with a dry cloth, taking care not to rub too much, as the paint may come off.

To Keep Tablecloths Smooth.

Instead of folding tablecloths after they are washed, roll them, folded once or twice, lengthwise on flannel tubes of cardboard. This makes a smoother cloth, with fewer creases, which is, of course, to be desired.

On Toast.

Serving green vegetables on toast is an economical as well as a palatable method. It makes the vegetable "go farther," adds considerably to the total food value of the dish, and is one more good way of using stale bread.

EVICT THE SWANS

The swans which made their home on an island in the Charles River between Faneuil and Watertown several months ago are to be forcibly evicted by the Metropolitan Park police on account of complaints of canoeists and oarsmen, who declare that the swans have declared war on every kind of craft that come within a short distance of their nest.

The announcement of the eviction comes from the police, who have been able as yet to capture only the father of the family. The female swan and brood of four young ones is still living at her Charles River home and fights off all attempts to catch her. She allows no one to come anywhere near the nest and until she surrenders the police say they will have to await her leisure.

It is the intention of the police to remove the swans to the Fellsway, where there is less boating.

WONDERFUL FIREWORKS

At Braves Field next Wednesday evening will be given the fourth in the series of displays of fireworks that have been featured at the "Home of Big Things" this summer. It is unanimously agreed by the press, as well as by the thousands who have witnessed any of these wonderful pyrotechnic exhibitions, that never before have any such pretentious displays of fireworks been given in Boston or elsewhere. With each show the crowds have increased in great numbers. A week ago over 10,000 paid admission into Braves Field to enjoy the entertainment.

In presenting these programs, the management has adopted the policy of using set pieces very largely and have made a big hit with the crowds. The program each week is radically different from that of any of the preceding shows. For next Wednesday night the feature set piece will be a reproduction of Brooklyn Bridge with cars running across and boats plying beneath the bridge. There will also be, in the line of set pieces, a merry-go-round with eight horses and children wheeling about at a rapid gait, a kicking donkey, a boy on a string, a walking man and other moving novelties. The more serious set pieces will be very elaborate while the grand finale alone costing upwards of $500 will result in an aerial display and bombardment of noise that will be seen and heard for miles around.

The fireworks will be staged at 8.30 o'clock, or as soon thereafter as possible for the Braves Field will be used that afternoon for a double header ball game. Palladino's band will give a concert beginning at 7.30 o'clock.

RESOLUTIONS

The following resolutions have recently been adopted by the officers and directors of the Federal Trust Company of Boston in memory of the late David Bates of Newton Highlands.

The Directors of the Federal Trust Company received with deep regret the news of the death of David Bates, and desire to place on the records of this Company an expression of their deep regret.

Mr. Bates was connected with the Federal Trust Company since its organization. During all that period he had the unlimited confidence of every Officer and Director of the Trust.

It was the same confidence that he had enjoyed with the Banks of Boston in his fifty-one years of service in the Banking district.

His was the old fashioned type of rugged honesty, that made everyone trust him and endeared him to all who knew him.

This Company wishes to pay this tribute to a faithful official and an honest man, and desires that this resolution be spread upon its records and that copies be sent to his family and to the press.

NORUMBEGA'S GREAT FEATURES

"Undine," a motion picture classic and one of the strongest photoplays ever filmed, featuring Ida Schnall, the perfect woman, will be shown in the open-air theatre at Norumbega each evening next week.

Miss Schnall is surrounded by a bevy of beautiful girl swimmers. No expense was spared in filming the picture, which created a furore in New York and which promises to eclipse the great success gained by "Neptune's Daughter" at Norumbega last season. The picture will be shown each evening only and at the afternoon performances vaudeville will be presented.

Probably the greatest entertainment feature of the season at the popular resort will be offered the week of August 7, when Whitcomb's Concert Band of forty-five solo musicians from all parts of New England, will give concerts each after and evening in the theatre. This is an event of great moment to music lovers and the band will be assisted by Louise Reynolds, prima donna soprano, and by John Thomas, humorist.

At the regular concert Sunday night a five-reel picture of "David Harum" will be featured.

Just Two Kinds of Men in the World

By J. R. HAMILTON
Former Advertising Manager of Wanamaker's, Philadelphia

Financially, there are just two kinds of men in the world; those who constantly figure upon the principal of their money and those who deal with the interest on the principal.

The one kind of man throws away ten dollars carelessly and says, "What's the difference. It is only a ten dollar bill."

The other holds on to that ten and says, "Ten dollars is the interest at 5 per cent on a capital of two hundred dollars."

One man figures on how much ten dollars will buy. The other man figures on how much it would cost him to buy ten dollars.

A difference of principal and interest—that is all.

Yet the principal figure is not the principle figurer in life. Indeed, he counts for very little except when he is spending that ten. No one comes to him with opportunities. No one considers him as a possible investor in anything good. Money always passes him quietly by.

And yet this is all a simple habit of mind. The difference between financial success and financial failure is only a little trick of the brain.

And the habit of figuring interest—the habit of figuring every dollar you spend as the interest on twenty times that amount at five per cent, is very easily learned.

Try it now in the personal things you are going out to buy. If you need a suit of clothes, look through the advertising in this paper. See where you can save five dollars, and then say to yourself, "I am not merely saving five dollars by buying a suit of clothes from this advertisement; I am saving the amount which one hundred dollars would earn if it worked at five per cent interest for a whole year."

That's the thing that brings you to your muttons. That's the thing that makes you stop and think.

Now these good sales are going on all through this paper. You can save money on anything you buy. Your clothes, your shoes, your shirts, your household goods—all offer money-saving opportunities in these sales.

Why, you can save the interest on at least five hundred dollars if you will only go at it right. And show me the man to whom five hundred dollars is not a capital worth considering?

Interest—that is the thing to figure on always. And the way to save the interest on a lot of money is to watch the advertising in this paper day by day and do your buying from these sales.

THE STORE OF QUALITY

THE MESA VERDE NATIONAL PARK

which yielded them a small crop of corn.

Life must have been hard in this dry country, when the Mesa Verde communities flourished in the sides of these sandstone cliffs. Game was scarce and hunting arduous. The Mancos yielded a few fishes. The earth contributed berries or nuts. At that time, as at present, water was rare, and found only in sequestered places near the heads of canyons, but notwithstanding these difficulties the inhabitants cultivated their farms and raised their corn, which they ground on flat stones called metates, and baked their bread on a flat stone gridle. They boiled their meat in well-made vessels, some of which were artistically decorated.

Their life was hard, but so confidently did they believe that they were dependent upon the gods to make the rain fall and the corn grow that they were religious people who worshipped the sun as the father of all, and the earth as the mother who brought them all their material blessings. They possessed no written language, and could only record their thoughts by a few symbols which they painted on their earthenware jars or scratched on the sides of the cliffs adjoining their habitations.

As their sense of beauty was keen, their art, though primitive, was true; rarely realistic, generally symbolic. Their decoration of cotton fabrics and ceramic work might be called beautiful, even when judged by the highly developed taste of to-day. They fashioned axes, spear points, and rude tools of stone; they wove sandals and made attractive baskets.

They were not content with rude buildings, and had long outgrown caves or earth homes that satisfied less civilized Indians farther north and south of them. They shaped stones into regular forms, ornamented them with designs and laid them on another. Their masonry resisted the destructive forces of centuries of rain and snow beating upon them.

The Mesa Verde tribes probably had little culture when they first climbed these precipitous rocks and found shelter, like animals, in the natural caves under the overhanging floor of the mesa. These caves were shelters not only from the storm of winter and the burning sun of summer, but from rapacious human enemies as well; for there are evidences of warfare among the prehistoric tribes of our south west lands.

But with the generations, perhaps the centuries, they made rapid strides. Ladders were substituted for zigzag trails, making their retreats more inaccessible, adobe supplemented caves, brick and stone succeeded adobe, culture succeeded savagery.

A great mound on the top of the mesa which Dr. Fewkes unearthed in the summer of 1915 shows that, probably about 1300 A. D. they had begun to emerge from the caves to build upon the surface, still a further advance in civilization. It is significant that this building is partially sculptured and architecturally ambitious. It is still more significant that it was not a house for temporal needs nor a fortress for warfare, but a religious structure. It was a temple to their god, the sun.

The remains of this advanced civilization, of quality so greatly beyond its neighbors, may be seen and studied by all who choose to visit the Mesa Verde National Park. It is an experience full of interest and pleasure. There are many canyons, and many ruins in each canyon. There are ruins yet unexplored. There are several mounds, like that under which Sun Temple was discovered, yet unexcavated. The visitor may enter these ruins and examine many of the articles which were found in them.

Two herdsmen, Richard and Alfred Wetherill, while hunting lost cattle one December day in 1888, discovered these ruins. Coming to the edge of a small canyon, they saw under the overhanging cliffs the opposite side, apparently hanging above at great precipice, what they thought was a city with towers and walls. They were astonished beyond measure—and indeed even the expectant visitor of today involuntarily exclaims over the surprise and beauty of the spectacle.

Later they explored it and called it Cliff Palace—an unfortunate name, for it was not a palace at all, but a village with two hundred rooms for family living and with twenty-two living, dining, and sleeping rooms, for worship. Later on they found another similar community dwelling which once sheltered 350 inhabitants. This they called Spruce Tree House because a large spruce tree grew near it. These names have remained.

Other explorers followed and many other ruins were found. This is not the place to name or describe them, but it may be said that here may be seen the oldest and most fully realized civic-center scheme in America. City planning of which we hear so much now, as if it were a new idea, began in America five or six centuries ago under the cliffs of the Mesa Verde.

Antiquities are not the only attractions in the Mesa Verde National Park. Its natural beauties should not be overlooked. In winter it is wholly inaccessible on account of the deep snows; in some months it is dry and parched, but in June and July when rains come vegetation is in full bloom, the plants flower and the grass grows high in the glades; the trees put forth their new green leaves. The Mesa Verde is attractive in all seasons of the year and full of interest for those who love the unusual and picturesque of mountain scenery.

Torsion-Testing Machine.

One of the interesting exhibits at the San Francisco exposition is a machine for testing the twisting strength of steel, which records autographically the torsion curve of the piece of metal under test. Heretofore this measurement has been calculated, with more or less accuracy, by the person making the test. It has a capacity of 230,000 inch pounds, and will test specimens ranging from one-eighth of an inch to two and a half inches in diameter, and of any length up to eight feet.

TRAVELED BY PARCEL POST

Englishman Duly Forwarded to His Destination on the Payment of a Small Sum.

The parcel post has made its usefulness felt in many ways, unexpected as well as foreseen. But the English parcel post does one surprising thing that has not yet been introduced into our own system.

An Englishman wished to reach a customer living in a remote part of Balham, one of the suburbs of London, and it was very necessary that he find him quickly. Knowing nothing of the district, he called at the general post office at St. Martins-le-Grand to consult a directory. On explaining his case to a clerk he was amazed to learn that he could be sent to the address by parcel post by paying a fee of six cents a mile.

The gentleman had never heard of such a thing, and it is said that very few persons in England know that it can be done. He was placed in charge of a messenger who was familiar with all parts of the city, and was soon on his way. The boy carried a printed slip on which was written a description of the "parcel" in charge, under the heading, "Article required to be delivered," and before leaving the customer's house both the customer and the gentleman had to put their signatures on the paper. The limit in weight for anything delivered by parcel post in England is generally understood to be eleven pounds, but there is one clause that reads: "A person may be conducted by express messenger to any address on payment of the mileage fee."—Youth's Companion.

STOP MARCH FOR DEVOTIONS

Soldiers Halted to Light Candles at Wayside Shrine in Stricken Country of Montenegro.

War is not all horror and death, as the following little story illustrates: On Christmas eve as a division of Hungarian Honveds marching through the Tara district in Montenegro was descending the serpentine road leading down steeply from the mountains the first regiment passed by a little wayside shrine of the Virgin and child. Two men stepped suddenly out of the ranks, lighted two small candles and placed them before the images.

Many others followed their examples and the number grew to probably 1,000 altogether. It was dusk and the spectacle of the tiny flames flickering clear in the still wintry air was a dramatic spectacle to behold.

So numerous were the gray worshippers that as the space immediately around the shrine gave out hundreds of Honveds dug their tapers into the ground around it.

The whole snow-covered meadow on which the shrine stood had been converted into a mass of flickering flames. Silently the men stood, sending their Christmas prayers to the "Christkind."

Then the snow and the dark and the slush of the road once more swallowed up the long column of the Black mountain's invaders. — New York Sun.

New Bullet Extractor.

An ingenious instrument has been invented to aid surgeons in extracting bullets from wounds. The bullet is located by means of X-rays and a pair of forceps. A very powerful pair of forceps is necessary to grip and extract a bullet, and a great deal of damage might be done if something that was not seen, perhaps an artery or a nerve, was picked up along with the bullet. Accordingly, the blades of the forceps are attached to an electric bell which only rings when both the blades are touching the bullet. Therefore, if the bell is made to ring while the blades are being opened to grasp the bullet, and if the bell continues to ring when the bullet is seized, nothing else can have been picked up beside the bullet, and there is no danger in pulling it out.

The surgeon using this instrument can therefore not only see what he is doing, but, by means of the bell, he has a very accurate sense of touch for any piece of metal that he is watching the points of his forceps attempting to pick up from among the structures deep down below the skin.

Egg Not Good "Pudding."

One egg misplaced caused more than the average amount of trouble for a young schoolboy who happened to find it while the teacher had the pupils out for a walk in the woods. The boy found the egg, was proud of having found it, and put it in his hip pocket.

In the course of the afternoon, however, he strolled too far from the other children, and the teacher spent a long time hunting him. When she found him the punishment was to paddle him.

But how was the teacher to know about the egg? She did not. The egg broke, the boy cried and the teacher laughed.

A second cry followed the boy's first one, though, for his mother inflicted more severe punishment than the teacher attempted, because his clothes were soiled.—Indianapolis News.

Prudent Silence.

"Do you intend to take any steps to contradict the people who misrepresent you?"

"No," replied Senator Sorghum. "When you contradict something you run the risk of bringing the matter to the attention of a whole lot of people who never would have heard about it if you kept still."

NEWTON SOLDIERS' RELIEF

Now that war seems to have been averted many people have the impression that the relief work for the families of soldiers who are in Texas is not essential or necessary. The Newton Soldiers' Relief Committee is still active and is quietly carrying on its work.

Before the actual announcement of the personnel of the Committee, Mayor Childs, Major Barnes, General White, and Mr. A. C. Walworth visited the Company at Framingham, conferred with Captain Cormerais, and secured from him a list of all the families that might need assistance while the men were away from home. All these families were visited and arrangements made with them for such assistance as they needed. It was found that about eighteen or twenty families should be put on the list. Today eight families are receiving a weekly check from the Committee.

There are two or three cases where the families are being looked after by individual citizens or by their employers who are sending the soldier's weekly pay to the wife.

The necessity for orderliness and prevention of duplication was early appreciated, and it was decided that the list to be looked after by the Newton Committee should consist of the men who left Newton with Company C. In addition to this, recruits living in Newton are referred by the Massachusetts Volunteer Aid Association to the Newton Committee and recruits living outside of Newton, who apply to the Newton Committee, are referred to the Massachusetts Volunteer Aid Association.

It is quite impossible to state how long the soldiers will be in Texas, and therefore it is not possible to state how much money will be needed. Approximately $1800 have been subscribed. The Committee estimates that a total of $5000 should be raised now and desires that further contributions be made. These should be sent to F. W. Stearns, 140 Tremont street, Boston.

The Committee will appreciate it if any persons hearing of any cases where assistance is needed will communicate promptly with Major F. P. Barnes, Secretary of the Committee, who is at the Newton Armory, West Newton, from 9.30 to 10.30 every day, or with the Mayor at City Hall. Stories come to the ears of the Committee from time to time, of cases of distress where the Committee may seem to have neglected its duty. Before these cases are given credence they should be thoroughly investigated. It is not thought by the Committee that any such cases exist.

PLAYGROUND CONCERT

The City of Newton Playground Department is enabled, through the courtesy of some of the ladies from all parts of Newton who are paying the expenses, to announce two more evening concerts, the first one August 3rd at the Y. M. C. A. grounds in Newton, and the second one will take place August 10th at Upper Falls. Both of these concerts will start at 8 o'clock. These ladies are interested in helping to furnish wholesome recreation for those young people who are unable to enjoy outdoor recreation during the day time. The concert which was given a week ago at the Stearns Playground proved such a great success that it is hoped that these evening concerts will become a regular institution in Newton.
